No Such Thing As 'A Day In The Life Of A DHIA Technician'

York County DHIA technician Abbe Gore relocates her portable office, a tabletop, after wrapping up another test day on her herd circuit. Gore represents all DHIA technicians who work on the farm. Experiences are many and varied.

JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Somewhere across the state, at almost any hour of the day or night, a Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA) technician is on the job.

Or, as Centre County technician Anne Brooks puts it: "I set the alarm clock for a different time every day."

It's an observation that is probably echoed by nearly every one of the nearly 200 Pennsylvania DHIA technicians offering dairy herd testing to the commonwealth's thousands of dairy farmers. Pennsylvania DHIA, headquartered on Orchard Road, provides a range of herd testing and cow record-keeping information and services.

Anne Brooks, Bellefonte R3, is a senior technician for the state's milk production records and testing cooperative. Her job responsibilities include monthly weighing and sampling milk on client dairy herds and gathering data for comprehensive herd record information on production, feeding and breeding. As a senior technician, she also helps train new technicians and does fill-in testing around the state as needed.

What technicians do, she summarizes, is gather information that "gives the farmer a record of a cow's production to help determine if she is paying her way."

"Every day is different," adds this 15-year-veteran DHIA employee "I like the job because I get to meet new farmers and see new herds across the state."

Average size of the 30 herds which Brooks tests is about 60 cows, with more than 2,000 cows total on her circuit. Two of her herds each number 175 head in the milking string.

"Some technicians last a very short time, because they, or their families, can't adapt to the schedule," admits this mother of two grown children. Brooks got her job when the technician at the farm where she was helping to milk cows decided to quit - and asked if she might be interested in

Ag Protests Fee Impositions, Supports Management Effort

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin

Co.) — A number of people representing various segments of the state's agricultural segment on Tuesday voiced opposition to a proposal by the Susquehanna River Basin Commission that would initiate a fee structure for relatively high levels of water use.

At the same time, the majority of those testifying also offered comments of support in the commission's effort to manage the water supply for the commonwealth.

The SRBC — an autonomous agency formed by a compact between Pennsylvania, Maryland, New York and the United States in December 1970 to oversee water use within the basin of the Susquehanna River — has proposed a revision and addition to its regulations, and its staff is in the process of holding public hearings on the proposal.

Perhaps the most significant changes to the regulations are proposals that would include agriculture and community water suppliers as having to abide by the regulations, especially the consumptive-use regulations, Poet Hill Genuine Risk received championship honors for Susan Means of New Albany last week at the Pennsylvania Dairy Goat Association show. See story on Page A32.

Genetics Key Championship

ANDY ANDREWS

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) —

Justin Good understands the adage well enough to interpret it himself: "If it's going good, don't change anything."

Justin's efforts to ensure the same type of hog market genetics for his show animals, obtained from a Canadian source that garnered a championship at the New Holland Swine Show last October, clinched county swine champion at the 32nd annual Lancaster County FFA Hog Show and Sale at the Manheim Farm Show grounds last week.

His 230-pound "4-Way" hog — combining the preferred genetics of a Hampshire, Duroc, York, and Landrace — won lightweight

National Grain Market

St. Joseph, Mo.

Wednesday, June 29, 1994

DAILY NATIONAL GRAIN SUMMARY WHEAT PRICES ARE MIXED WEDNESDAY, WITH ON GOING HARVEST ADDING PRESSURE AND MUCH IMPROVED EXPORT DEMAND UNDERPINNING PRICES. CORN AND BEAN PRICES PLUM-METED IN REACTION TO REVISED WEATHER FORECASTS FOR NEXT WEEK IN MIDWEST AREAS. WHEAT MIXED. CORN 9 TO 12 CENTS LOWER. SORGHUM 17 TO 25 CENTS LOWER. SOY-BEANS 20 TO 22 CENTS LOWER. ACTIVE HARVEST AND REPORTED GOOD YIELDS ERASED SOME OF YESTERDAY'S PRICE SUPPORT. THE SOFT RED WINTER WHEAT HARVEST IS NEARLY COMPLETE IN THE SOUTHEAST AND DELTA STATES WHERE RECORD QUALITY YIELDS HAVE BEEN REPORTED. HARD RED WINTER COMBINING HAS MOVED NORTHWARD INTO IOWA WITH KANSAS ALL BUT FINISHED.

WHEAT EXPORT SALES POURED IN TODAY AND HELPED TO SUSTAIN SOME OF TUESDAY'S GAINS WITH TAIWAN AND JAPAN MAJOR BUYERS. CORN AND BEAN PRICES HAVE BEEN AS CHANGEABLE AS THE WEATHER LATELY. A COOLER THAN EXPECTED HOT FRONT HAS BEEN FORECAST FOR MIDWEST AREAS NEXT WEEK AND SOME FEARS OF CROP DAMAGE HAVE EASED. CORN IS ENTERING THE CRITICAL SILKING STAGE AND MOISTURE AND COOLER TEMPERATURES ARE VERY IMPORTANT TO THE PROCESS. HEAVY PROFIT TAKING ON THE BOARD ALSO UNDERMINED BEAN PRICES AS MILD WEATHER PROMOTES POTENTIAL FOR GOOD YIELDS.

EXPORT NEWS: TRINIDAD AND TOBAGO BOUGHT 3,600 TONNES NORTHERN/DARK NORTHERN SPRING WHEAT UNDER EEP FOR JULY SHIPMENT. NICARAGUA BOUGHT 1,900 TONNES HARD RED WINTER WHEAT UNDER EEP FOR JULY SHIPMENT. CCC BOUGHT 76,372 TONNES U.S. HARD RED WINTER WHEAT FOR EXPORT DISTRIBUTION TO PERU FOR JULY/

AUGUST SHIPMENT. JAPAN BOUGHT 38,094 TONNES WESTERN WHITE WHEAT FOR AUGUST SHIPMENT. TAIWAN BOUGHT 87,300 TONNES DARK NORTHERN SPRING WHEAT, 50,300 TONNES HARD RED WINTER AND 16,400 TONNES WESTERN WHITE WHEAT FOR JULY/SEPTEMBER SHIPMENTS.

JULY 4-10, 1994

FREEDOM WEEK

So Far Away

On July 5 the Earth will be at aphelion, that is, at the point in its orbit farthest (94,512,258 miles) from the Sun. This may seem like a contradiction, but the Sun really is farthest from the Earth during our summer and closest (perihelion: January 2, 1994) in the winter. The fact is that our seasons are not caused by the Sun's distance from the Earth, but rather by the angle of the Sun's rays hitting the Earth. In the summer, the Sun is high in the sky; its rays strike the ground more directly and are more effective in heating. In the winter, the Sun is low in the sky and its rays are at an oblique angle, resulting in the feeble sunlight we experience in winter.

— Spanish Proverb

TIP OF THE WEEK

Prevent wicker furniture from yellowing by washing in a mild salt-water solution.

EARTHWISE

Here's good news. Six-pack rings are photodegradable and equipped with Tear-Tabs™ to reduce wildlife entrapment. They're also part of a closed-loop recycling program. ITW Hi-Cone, manufacturer of rings, developed the Ring Leader Recycling Program, presently active in over 2,000 schools and businesses in the U.S. They make it easy to recycle those rings. For more information contact: ITW Hi-Cone Recycling Department, 1140 West Bryn Mawr Ave., Itasca, IL 60143, telephone: 708-773-9300.

OPINION

The Rural Health Care Reform We Need

While all Americans have a stake in the health care reforms that are being proposed on the national level, rural and agricultural communities and individuals face special challenges. More than 95 percent of farmers and ranchers are self-employed and pay the cost of insurance coverage right out of their pockets and are not able to pass on health care expenses as part of the price of their products. Many other businesses do pass these costs on to the consumers of their products.

We believe Congress should provide "tax fairness" that would provide 100 percent deductibility of health insurance costs for self-employed people. Employees of companies with proper programs can have health insurance costs deducted from their wages before employment taxes are figured. Why shouldn't farmers be able to deduct their health insurance costs before paying income taxes too?

In addition, farmers and other rural Americans should have the option to keep their current coverage, choose from voluntary competing alliances, or form their own alliances if they wish. Under many current proposals, farmers wouldn't be able to keep the plan they now have, even if it costs them less and they like it more.

Rural Americans can and should be one of the winners in health care reform. But when the tough decisions are made, we can't be forgotten or lumped into a group whose needs are not the same as the unique needs of agriculture. As Communicating for Agriculture, Inc. has said in an open letter to Congress: "The health care reform we get should be the health care reform we need."

Contrary to the "trend of annual cuts to agriculture" mentioned in your paper's budget story last week, state funding for agriculture has increased year after year under the Casey Administration. Like other state agencies, the Department of Agriculture tightened its belt when doing so was in the best interest of the citizens, but the facts clearly show that state funding for the Department under the Casey Administration has increased from $31.4 million in fiscal year 1986-87 to $43.8 million for fiscal year 1994-95. This is an increase of 39.5 percent.

Once again, Governor Casey has demonstrated his support for Pennsylvania's producers and consumers. By signing the new state budget, the Governor has given Pennsylvania's animal agriculture the funding source needed to move toward completion of the tripartite diagnostic system. The New Bol-

To Attend

Animal Housing Expo

The Annual Animal Housing Expo will be held July 12-13 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day at the Lebanon Fairgrounds in Lebanon.

The design and construction of animal housing facilities has a long-term effect on the health and productivity of animals and the profitability of the farm. The Animal Housing Expo affords livestock, dairy and poultry producers an opportunity to receive new ideas and assistance in the design and construction of animal housing and handling facilities.

There will be commercial exhibitors and educational speakers including Dr. David Kohl, Virginia Tech, on financial planning; Dr. Doug Reineman, University of Wisconsin, on milking system management; and Dr. Howard Person, Michigan State, on building design for rodent and bird control.

This year will also feature an evening tour and cookout. The tour will feature a new dairy freestall and milking parlor.

Reservations are required for the tour. For more information, contact your local extension office or the Lancaster County Coopera-

To Explore Teen Tax Credit

The July issue of Money magazine had a short statement on an under-used tax credit.

If you are self-employed, you might be able to take advantage of this targeted jobs tax credit. You can claim a 40 percent tax credit for up to $3,000 in wages paid to 16- and 17-year-olds who work for you between May 1 and September 1.

That is $1,200 off your tax bill. The youth must be a member of an economically disadvantaged family.

For more information, contact your accountant or call the IRS at 800-Tax-Form and ask for your free copy of IRS Publication 907.

To Adjust Swine Rations

Heat affects swine production, according to Chester Hughes, extension livestock agent.

Hogs are more sensitive to heat the heavier they get. Heat-stressed pigs eat less, which means their growth rate takes a turn for the worse.

As a hog surpasses 200 pounds, daily feed intake may drop to near zero when temperatures exceed 90 degrees F. With summer weather upon us, it is a good idea to re-evaluate the nutrient density of your finishing ration.

Start with the amino acids, the most limiting nutrient for growing and finishing pigs. Up the lysine during hot weather by 10 to 15 percent. Adding energy dense fat to the diet (fat has about 2.25 times more energy than carbohydrates or protein) helps maintain pigs' calorie intake. Because it is more easily digested than fiber, fat helps keep body temperatures down.

A DAY'S PORTION

A DAY'S PORTION

July 3, 1994

Background Scripture:

Exodus 16

Devotional Reading:

Exodus 17:1-13

I marvel when I think that the Exodus actually took place several thousand years ago, for there are elements in this story that are as contemporary as today's newspaper. For one thing, the complaint to Moses and Aaron by the people of Israel: "Would that we had died by the hand of the Lord in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the fleshpots and ate bread to the full; for you have brought us out into this wilderness to kill this whole assembly with hunger" (16:3).

That sounds like something that could have been voiced in the Administrative Board of our church. Not those words, of course, but something quite similar. Think of the context of these complaints; after years of slavery in Egypt, through Moses God has led the people of Israel out of their bondage and enabled them to escape the wrath of the Egyptians. Furthermore, God has promised to lead them to a prosperous Promised Land that will be their inheritance. What a spot to be in!

But the Israelites didn't see it that way. Yes, it was good not to be slaves anymore. Yes, the miraculous escape from Egypt had been thrilling. And, yes, they were happy to be going to Canaan. But now they were hungry and that was all they could think about. What good are a great past and the promise of an even greater future, if in the present moment we have empty bellies?

LATELY?

Their complaint reminds me of the story of the man who approached his friend and said, "Sam, I know that when I needed help to build my house, you pitched in. And when I was down on my luck, you loaned me enough to get me through. When I was in need of a job, you steered me in the right direction. And when my wife walked out on me, you talked her into giving me another chance. But, Sam, things aren't going too good for me right now. So what have you done for me lately?" (Sam and God seem to have the same "friends.")

Someone has said, "Be careful what you pray for; God just might give it to you." The people of Israel had prayed long and hard, asking God to lift from them the yoke of Egyptian slavery. If only they could be free! So now they were free, but that did not satisfy them. Now they longed to return to that slavery in Egypt so that they would have enough to eat. ("... died by the hand of the Lord" means to die by natural causes.) Are we not like that, too? Often we would rather have material security than freedom. Freedom doesn't look as good on an empty stomach.

DAILY BREAD

Once again, God responds to their prayers (like many of us today, their prayers were mainly complaints). "Behold, I will rain bread from heaven for you; and the people shall go out and gather a day's portion, that I may prove them" (16:4). God was going to test their faith by giving them just enough food for one day at a time. Perhaps this verse inspired the petition of the Lord's Prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread."

There were some 1994-style people in that Israelite band. Although told to gather only enough for their daily need, some clever souls decided to gather more and stockpile it. (Maybe the first black market!) Others, told not to leave any manna until morning, did just that. These people demonstrated their lack of faith. They were not willing to live by God's promise alone.

Sometimes it seems difficult to trust God's providence. But that's what he asks of us, to live one day at a time, to be satisfied with one day's portion and to trust him for the rest.

100% PASTURE + HAY

CURT & BRENDA DIETRICH — NEW TRIPOLI

31 HEAD DHI RHA 24,758 MILK, 801 PROTEIN, 694 FAT

With 61 acres of hillside farm, and a full time job Curt did not want the headaches of owning equipment and renting land. Into his third year of intensive grazing, he likes the idea of only owning three pieces of equipment; a tractor, rotary mower, and manure spreader. Brown's balances his feed program using 34 AMINO PLUS PELLETS and our FLEX—FORMULA system to add the extra energy, minerals, and vitamins top cows on intensive grazing need.

TO FIND PASTURE MIXES RIGHT FOR THEIR FARM

60% PASTURE + TMR

DAVID & CHRIS WILLIAMS — LEBANON

61 HEAD RHA 24,013 MILK, 774 PROTEIN, 808 FAT

In his third year of grazing, David uses 34 acres of permanent pasture, and 23 acres of temporary pasture efficiently to feed 130 head. Last year he grazed from May 1st to Thanksgiving and averaged 70 to 75 lbs. milk per cow. He calls his cows self-propelled forages harvesters. They also spread manure saving him money since he hires custom operators to do both. BROWN'S 30 HM BALANCER and 30 PROLAC PELLETS balance the undegradable protein, energy, and fiber often deficient in high pasture programs. Breeding and body condition are important to Dave, and he credits BROWN'S supplements with helping to maintain both on pasture.

EL-GENE HOLSTEINS — MANHEIM

WITH 42 COWS AND EVEN MORE HEIFERS, EUGENE USES
20 ACRES OF LOW LAND PASTURE EFFICIENTLY BUT DOES NOT RELY ON IT FOR ALL HIS HERDS NEEDS. HE IS SHOWN HERE WITH DAVE McCRACKEN, BROWN'S AREA DIRECTOR.

Low land pasture provides one-fourth of Eugene's forage needs, but permanent well — managed alfalfa and corn fields make better use of fertile Manheim soils. Brown's balances this program with BROWN'S 40 MILKMASTER and uses the FLEX-FORMULA concept to add cooked beans, extra fat, extra minerals, and vitamins. BROWN'S 24 AMINO PLUS C with delinted cottonseed provide top cows with high levels of undegradable protein and extra fiber. In mid May the tank reading was at 80 lbs. of milk, the top cow was over 40,000 lbs. milk, and a young herd had an ME average of over 26,000 lbs. of milk. Eugene says he is happy with his herds progress and is excited about their future potential. He is pleased with the way his herd has done on Brown's feeding programs, and likes the assistance Brown's Area Director Dave McCracken and nutritionist Dr. Walter Kennett provide him in reaching his herd goals.

DIRECT X PRESS SYSTEM

BELT FEEDERS & CONVEYORS

Big Capacity Delivery... With All The Advantages Of Dependable, Efficient, Low Profile Direct Drive Design!

That's what farmers really appreciate about the new Jamesway family of Direct X Press Feeders and Conveyors. All models feature a dependable and efficient heavy duty industrial drive, with enclosed oil bath and standard 1, 2 or 3 HP C-faced motors. Our direct drive design eliminates pulleys, jackshafts, sprockets, chains, V-belts and shields. The low profile motor and drive can be mounted on either side for added installation versatility.

The Direct X Press family includes:

• DXF 1400 Single or Divided Lot 14" Wide Belt Feeder 180" Maximum Length

• DXC 1400 - 14" Wide Belt Conveyor 180" Maximum Length

• DXC 1800 - 18" Wide Belt Conveyor 180" Maximum Length

• DXC 2400 - 24" Wide Belt Conveyor 124" Maximum Length

"X" Sides Are Standard

All Direct X Press System models feature heavy 16-gauge weather resistant galvanized steel sides in 2-1/2", 5" and 10" sections. We call them "X" sides because they are "X-tra" strong and will span 20' between supports. And they are built to last and will stay looking good "X-tra" long!

Do It Your Way!

Match your feeding layout and requirements with reversible elevating conveyors, inclines and declines without sacrificing capacity, speed and uniform delivery. All inclines and declines are infinitely adjustable up to 30 degrees elevation for textured belt and up to 15 degrees elevation for smooth belt.

Tough 1/8" thick polyester belt with PVC covering and dependable stainless steel industrial splice is a year-round performer and flexes in sub-zero weather. Choice of smooth or textured belt for conveyors in 14", 18" and 24" widths. Belt speed is 230 feet per minute.

Crop, Weather Report

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 26

GOOD WEEK FOR FIELDWORK: There were five days suitable for fieldwork. Scattered showers and thunderstorms gave most sections some rainfall, but amounts varied from a few tenths to around 2 inches. Average temperature for the state was above normal for the 16th week in a row. Soil moisture was rated short by 63 percent of our respondents, adequate by 36 percent, and surplus by 2 percent. These were the driest conditions reported this year and many crops were suffering from the heat and low soil moisture. Activities included planting soybeans, transplanting tobacco, making hay, spraying corn, spreading fertilizer, hauling manure, and caring for livestock.

LIVESTOCK: Pasture feed available was poor to fair and continued to decline because of the hot, dry weather. Many farmers were feeding supplemental hay to livestock because of the poor recovery of pasture.

ANIMAL HOUSING EXPO

July 12, 13, 1994 Lebanon Fairgrounds

A show for Northeast livestock, dairy and poultry producers

PENN STATE

College of Agricultural Sciences
Cooperative Extension
Penn State is an affirmative action, equal opportunity university.

Dairy, livestock, and poultry products are a significant part of Pennsylvania agriculture. While several farm shows are held throughout the Commonwealth, few concentrate on the needs and issues of animal housing. The demonstrations, speakers, and exhibits at the Animal Housing Expo will focus on proven, state-of-the-art ventilation, feeding, watering, manure handling, and housing systems.

Dairy, livestock and poultry producers may spend as little as a few hundred dollars for renovations or up to several hundreds thousand dollars for new facilities to provide adequate housing for their animals. At the Animal Housing Expo, these producers will have an opportunity to investigate available options, talk with industry experts, and select the system and services that best meet their needs.

Farmers Should Understand The Risks Of Silo Gas, Molds

Part 2 Of A Series

Editor's Note: The first of this series detailed farmers' experiences with deadly silo gas and a Lancaster County Amish farm about five years ago in which two boys, ages 8-10 years old, ended up in the hospital because of silo gas exposure. Nothing was said. Murphy wonders, how often ties in Lancaster County from 1980-1992, farm accidents are not required to be reported. How many could have involved silo gas exposure?

"For farmers, it's not that they're hiding it," Murphy told Lancaster Farming. "But there's no required reporting of incidences like that, or cases like that, and it's just a part of farming."

Murphy said that farmers just accept the hazards. Farmers also ignore the fact that safety equipment — particularly self-contained respirators and ear/eye protection — just aren't being used.

He told those at the safety conference, "A lot of people have a difficult time being able to understand the difference between a nuisance dust mask, a toxic dust mask, mold exposure. In part 2, farmers should be aware of the risks involved when they are exposed to silo gas and should take steps to ensure safety.

does this happen? How many illnesses and deaths as a result of exposure are attributed to "sudden heart attacks" and simply "ill health"?

Most farmers should know the

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
MILLERSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Nowhere on the "Summary of Fatal Farm Accidents" report for 1993, compiled by Penn State University, does it indicate how many farmers may have been exposed to deadly silo gas from leveling off silage.

That's because exposure to the gas — which can cause flu-like symptoms ranging from a cough to difficulty breathing — is often thought of as merely the onset of a cold. It goes unreported.

Many farmers ignore the fact that, after filling a silo and opening the doors, they walk away from the chute feeling lightheaded or drowsy. They think, ah well, all in a day's work. They go into the house, have supper, go to bed, and try to forget about it.

The more severe cases can't forget about it. They end up in the hospital.

Dr. Dennis Murphy, Penn State professor of agricultural engineering, said he had heard of a story of dangers of filling silos and exposure to "nitrogen dioxide," the result of fermentation of haylage or corn silage. In the May 29, 1993 issue of Lancaster Farming, a story detailed how filling silos is a dangerous job. The article spoke about how "silo gases can cause unconsciousness, injury, and even death, especially in the first 48 to 60 hours after filling. Dangerous levels of silo gas may persist for two to three weeks after filling."

How many illnesses and deaths as a result of exposure are attributed to 'sudden heart attacks' and simply 'ill health'?

So the word is spread from farm to farm and from family to family. Is it heeded?

In many cases, it isn't, according to Murphy, who spoke at the recent 1994 Workplace Safety Conference at Millersville University, sponsored by the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce. While there have been at least 43 fatali-a chemical cartridge mask, or an air-supplied respirator."

But Murphy remembers stories, told anecdotally, about how farmers got exposed to "a little gas" and how they got out of it OK. They ignore the long-term affects. It's just a part of farming.

Farmers are often exposed because they don't understand that the silo needs to be ventilated "right after filling." Farmers often don't fill all at one cutting, "so they're in there, in and out, a lot of times, doing lots of different things. So that's why they get exposure to the silo gas."

Across the state, according to Murphy, there are about 7,000 work injuries a year in agriculture. Of those, about 40 are fatal.

Of the 7,000 injuries, about 71 percent are disabling for at least

Dr. Dennis Murphy, Penn State professor of agricultural engineering, said he had heard of a story of a Lancaster County Amish farm about five years ago in which two boys, ages 8-10 years old, ended up in the hospital because of silo gas exposure. one day or more, according to the ag engineer.

Little is known how many are the result of silo gas exposure. How many farmers build up, over time, a long list of exposures that could put them at risk of developing a disabling lung condition, such as farmer's lung, later in life?

Many experts agree that farmers should carefully examine how they manage their silo filling and unloading operations.

What is needed is a more persistent amount of education.

Right now, extension is working on a broad-based, three-to-four year study on a model program to examine farmer safety. Included in that model program will be descriptions of on-farm hazards and a thorough examination of the risks farmers take, and what protective measures can be used, according to Murphy.

According to Dr. Robert Gillio, a specialist in lung diseases at Lancaster General who treated a silo gas victim in May this year, the patient was the first of such for the year treated at the hospital. There will be more.

Overall, according to Gillio, the number of victims has decreased steadily over the years, perhaps because of more farmer education.

He knows of a Minnesota farm where a father was killed because of silo gas exposure.

Murphy said the number of accidents related to silo gas are dropping, "but we're less comfortable with the level of accidents that are still occurring. They're really holding about the same."

Because of more education, farmers are becoming aware of the dangers and are taking steps to avert personal disaster. Preventative measures, such as making sure blowers are installed right after filling and the use of respirators around silos, have decreased the number of injuries through the years, according to the ag engineer.

Editor's Note: The final part of the series provides tips for preventing silo gas exposure and other breathing troubles.

Keep Cool Cows

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Whether you have 20 cows or 2,000, your herd needs help staying comfortable in hot weather. Minimizing heat gain and helping cows lose excess heat can keep them comfortable and productive, says an animal housing expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Cows like temperatures on the cool side," said Dr. Robert Graves, professor of agricultural engineering. "When temperatures exceed 75 to 78 degrees Fahrenheit, dairy cows should be provided with shade, extra air exchange and water."

"Look for early signs of heat discomfort and take action before it affects production," said Graves. "Are cows breathing faster? Is the line at the water trough getting longer? Is feed consumption slipping? Are cows standing around instead of lying down and ruminating?"

If your cows are overheated, you may need to make adjustments to your facilities.

"The milking parlor holding area, feeding areas and resting areas all should receive attention," Graves said. "Holding areas are especially critical. Do not keep cows in hot, crowded holding areas for more than one hour."

Shade is vital. "Well-ventilated barns, pastures with trees or shade structures all can provide protection from hot summer sun," Graves said. "Buildings used for winter shelter also can provide summer shade."

Air exchange and movement also is important.

"Air flowing over a cow will carry away the heat lost from her body and hot, moist air expelled from her mouth," Graves said. "Removing barn sidewalls and endwalls or providing extra exhaust fans will replace hot, moist air with fresh outside air."

Cows need a lot of water in the summer, so help them get their fill easily and conveniently.

"Cows easily can consume twice as much water during hot weather, so place extra water troughs around the barn," Graves said. "Cows particularly seem to enjoy a long, cool drink right after leaving the milking parlor."

Long periods of hot weather require additional measures. "Sprinkle cows with water then let them dry off," Graves said. "The evaporating moisture removes large amounts of heat from the cows and cooling continues while their haircoat dries."

Use a low-pressure nozzle that delivers 0.5 to 1.0 gallons per minute in large droplets.

"Fine mists will not penetrate the haircoat and may blow away before reaching the cows," Graves said. "Nozzles can be spaced along the feed line to wet cows' backs while they are eating. Automatic controls can turn the water on when the temperature exceeds 78 degrees, and then cycle it off and on until the temperature cools. Fans should be turned on when the temperature reaches 75 degrees."

High-pressure fan foggers continuously spray water into the air of a fan. As the water evaporates, it moistens the air and cools cows.

Keep your cows comfortable, but don't go overboard. "Operating cooling systems when they're not needed can chill cows," Graves said.

Grape Association Calls For More Growers

LENHARTSVILLE (Berks Co.) — Twenty-five years ago, a group of grape growers along the shores of Lake Erie fought to have the Pennsylvania Limited Wineries Act passed so they would have a market in the state for their grapes — especially wine grape varieties. The new law allowed for the establishment of Pennsylvania wineries that could sell directly to the public. Previously, wineries could only sell through the Pennsylvania State Store System, and only then if they could make very large volumes of wine.

Today that has all changed. There are now about 50 wineries in the state and 400 grape growers producing and selling 400,000 gallons of Pennsylvania wines annually; a figure that's expected to increase rapidly.

With the ever increasing acceptance and critical acclaim of Pennsylvania wines, many of the wineries are geared to expand production. Their future, however, depends on whether or not the grape supply can keep pace as Pennsylvania limited wineries, by law, can only use Pennsylvania grapes. Because currently there are not enough Pennsylvania grown grapes to meet this expanding need, the Pennsylvania Wine Association is seeking special legislation to allow them to go outside the state for additional wine grape tonnage — especially after the recent bad winter that had an adverse effect on grapevines.

Based on this situation, an organization of wine grape growers in the southeastern corner of the state known as SEGA (Southeast Grape Association) is trying to encourage more Pennsylvania farmers to consider putting in grape acreage. Its president, Eric Miller, who also owns Chaddsford Winery, said recently, "We are organizing more vineyard workshops to encourage new interest in wine grape growing. It offers many farmers an attractive additional source of income."

Depending upon the variety of grapes grown, wineries are paying between $400 to $1800 per ton. Typical yields range from 2 tons per acre to 6 tons per acre, depending on the type of grapes.

SEGA's next workshop meeting is scheduled for Saturday, July 9th at Naylor Vineyards in Stewartstown from noon until 5:00 p.m. Dr. Carl Haeseler, retired grape expert from Penn State, will present information on vineyard equipment, grape spray programs, trellising, and pruning.

To register for the meeting, send $15.00 for members, $20.00 for non-members to SEGA MEETING, 813 OLD ROUTE 22, LENHARTSVILLE, PA 19534. Or call Tanya Laudadio at (215) 756-4366. Directions to Naylor Vineyards will be given to those signing up for the workshop.

HAGERSTOWN, MD. — Lancaster PA DHIA recently announced they would start operating their own DHI Milk Laboratory in Lancaster County and discontinue sending their samples to the Mid-East DHIC Lab in Hagerstown, MD, effective in October.

Since Lancaster started testing with Mid-East in November 1992, Lancaster delivered the samples to the Mid-East lab on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings each week. The samples were then analyzed for fat, protein and somatic cells at Mid-East and the results electronically transmitted to the DRPC @ Raleigh the next workday, usually by 2:00 P.M. If Raleigh had the sample results by 2:00 PM, they would batch calculate the data and the resulting reports were in the mail the same day.

Mid-East Manager George Gramling explains this service was as fast as anyone could give. The samples were delivered to Mid-East after the end of the normal workday, and by transmitting the results to Raleigh by 2:00 P.M. the next day, the turnaround time was either one day for the lab and zero for the DRPC or zero for the Mid-East lab and one day for the DRPC!

The only way Lancaster will receive faster service according to Lancaster DHIA Manager, Jay Mylin, is being able to test the milk samples five days per week rather than delivering the samples to Mid-East three days per week as Lancaster has done.

Mid-East DHIC and Lancaster DHIA will continue to work closely in many areas such as DHI Supervisor training

Bobcat 7753 Long-Wheelbase Skid-Steer Loader

It's What's Inside That Counts!

Swingout Tailgate - one side engine and engine components service. Easy access to oil cooler and radiator (which are well protected). No need to raise lift arms.

Operator Friendly. You'll find the 7753 offers easy operator entry/exit into a roomy cab.

Dependable drive chains that NEVER need adjusting. The "bow tie" design uses prestressed, heavy-duty drive chains in two short continuous loops per side. That means long-life in the most rugged use and NO periodic, time-consuming drive chain adjustments.

Easy-to-use foot pedals control loader hydraulic functions, while two steering levers allow precise maneuverability.

Durable axles! Bobcat 7753 axles are solidly built then specially heat treated. Axle Bearings NEVER need greasing because a sealed oil bath keeps them lubricated. New axle hub design protects axle seal from damage from wire or twine. Hub is easily removed if service is required.

THE MISSIONS OF PA DHIA

BY DAVE SLUSSER, MANAGER

Pennsylvania DHIA provides records, information services, consulting services and products that are accurate, reliable, innovative and competitively priced to our member dairy farmers, so they can successfully manage their farms. Our mission and only reasons to exist is for your success. It is not to generate profits for PA DHIA, or to run some other DHIA organizations out of business.

To accomplish our mission, we have made changes in our lab, DRPC, and field staff. As a result, our total organization is as efficient as nay in the East, and our management reports to our members are produced by our own Dairy Records Processing Center. All of this is under one roof, and owned and controlled by our dairy farmer members. All the other dairy records processing centers serving the East are owned and controlled by either a large university or a private corporation. We have a commitment and we care about our members.

How are we doing with our mission? We are signing up new members in record numbers. The average PA DHIA member averages 4,000 lbs. more milk per cow than non-DHIA members. Our goal is to add 10,000 more cows. Why? Because that many cows properly managed with DHIA record could generate an additional $5,000,000, above what they are doing now. That is a lot of additional money for these 150 new members. That is our mission! On the competitive front, we have 35 new herds from other states while we have lost five herds to other states. Our competitive prices give us the advantage, and that also is our mission.

Finally, PA DHIA cares about the dairy farm mebers. I read last week in the paper that the prices of milk dropped $1.50 per hundred. I understand what that means to your cash flow. I have lived through that experience. I have walked in your shoes for nearly 24 years. During that period of my life, I did my own nutrition work, and I worked with my own vet on herd health. I could not imagine managing a herd without DHIA. Therefore, my personal mission is to provide a DHIA program that enhances your management needs, and that is managed as efficiently as you managing your herd.

We can summarize our entire mission statement with PA DHIA CARES!!

Beef Council Plans Summer Beef Promotion Program

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Beef Council (PBC) board of directors recently approved an extensive summer beef promotion effort geared at encouraging consumers to increase their beef purchases.

The funds for the promotion, which were diverted from other programs and a contingency reserve, will assist in moving the huge amount of beef in the marketplace that is depressing the price of live cattle.

"The checkoff program was never meant to be used as a bandage whenever cattle prices are hurting," said Elrose Glick, PBC chairman. "It is meant to build long-term demand for beef."

Glick said, however, that sometimes existing programs can be supplemented, extended, or redirected to increase consumer awareness of beef during times of price declines. The promotional program approved by the PBC board will increase consumer awareness through a radio advertising campaign in the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh markets, and an innovative cents-off couponing program in Harrisburg.

The radio commercials, which are aimed at the industry's target audience of adults, 25 to 54, feature the recognizable voice of Robert Mitchum, who encourages consumers to include beef in their summer grilling cookout. In the Philadelphia market, consumers are also encouraged to call in a special phone number to receive a free beef recipe booklet, and to learn of the weekly retail beef specials in their area. The coupon program, which will be conducted in partnership with a Harrisburg retailer, will provide consumers $1 off the purchase of eight pounds of fresh beef.

The action by the PBC board complements an extensive national checkoff-funded promotion program designed to help reduce the current oversupply situation. Among the national promotions are:

- Television advertising. The "Beef. It's What's For Dinner" television advertising campaign resumed June 13, and is scheduled to run throughout the summer months.

- Retail featuring. The Beef Industry summer retail featuring program is hitting nearly 80 retail chains, representing nearly 29,000 individual stores nationwide. Retail featuring is an incentive program aimed at increasing the featuring and special pricing of fresh beef. Traditionally, 40 to 60 percent of all beef retail movement can be attributed to retail featuring.

- Magazine advertising. An aggressive print advertising effort is under way in consumer magazines such as Better Homes and Gardens, Cooking Light, and Family Circle.

- Cut 'N Save labels. Consumers are urged to save money and beef in bulk through the checkoff program's Cut 'N Save label program. More than 1.1 million labels have gone to retailers. The labels show consumers who want to buy subprimals at a lower-per-pound cost how to cut and store the beef.

Chester County Dairy Milk Lines

Walter Wurster
Extension
Dairy Agent

As the 3rd Annual Animal Housing Expo approaches, my thoughts focus on the considerations and decisions dairy farmers should make before starting a building project. First, if you are planning on making any changes to your facilities in the next couple years, be sure to travel to the Lebanon County Fairgrounds on either July 12th or 13th to hear some excellent speakers, see housing-related educational displays and demonstrations and talk with commercial exhibitors.

No matter how large or small it is, when a construction project is undertaken on a farm it is an expensive investment that cannot easily be changed or rejected once completed. If your feeding program is not working, you can change it tomorrow. If an alfalfa stand dies, you can plow it up and plant another crop. However, if your new barn does not suit your operation, a bulldozer and a jackhammer are not a very economical or logical alternative to solving the problem. It is important to have the project meet your needs as closely as possible when it is completed.

Now for some of my thoughts on how dairy farmers can plan and complete a successful building project and avoid expensive pitfalls.

1 - Decide what type of facility meets the needs of your operation and whether you would be comfortable working in the new or renovated setup. There are many alternatives available that are functionally sound, but maybe only one or two that you would suit your farming philosophy.

2 - In order to help in the decision making process, visit farms that have constructed the types of facilities that you are considering. And ask questions! What do they like best? What would they change? (No project is perfect.) Were they satisfied with their builder and equipment supplier?

3 - If you are looking at adopting a relatively new concept, consider asking the farmer to let you work in his new setup for a part of a day. A typical example would be, before deciding on the new efficient parallel-parlor for your farm, milk in one at a neighbor's. When you spend over $100,000 for a parlor you use at least twice per day, you better enjoy working there.

4 - Collect all the information you can from builders and equipment dealers at trade fairs and by personal contacts. Also talk to people that service farms who see ideas that work and ones that fail. These would include veterinarians, nutrition consultants, A.I.

personnel, and Extension Agents.

5 - As you begin putting your ideas down on paper, consider the following points that many farms get hung-up on:

a - Keep some space between buildings to improve ventilation and fire safety. 50 feet should be a minimum distance between dairy barns.

b - Design barns for summer conditions, have the ability to open them up. There are many more days during the year with heat stress than winter problems. Cows begin to be affected by heat when the temperatures exceed 80°F.

c - Don't be afraid to remove a structure that does not fit your plans for the future. A 20-year-old feed bunk may have served your past operation very well, but today it is outmoded, in need of repair, and/or in the way for your new plan.

d - Think about cow comfort and employee comfort in your design. They will pay off with more milk and satisfied, efficient long-term employees.

6 - When it is time to select a builder and equipment supplier, solicit as many bids as possible and realize that the cheapest price may not be the best price for you. Again, ask questions! Where can you see examples of the type of project you want? Can they do it in a timely manner? How are change orders handled during construction? What ideas would they suggest to make the plan better?

7 - Finally, begin the planning process far enough in advance of the desired completion date. Quick decision jobs are usually not successful.

Ag Protests Fee Impositions, Supports Management Effort

enacted in 1976.

Previously, water companies were held exempt from the regulations, while the regulations were held suspended for agriculture.

The actual commission members are the three respective heads of each state's natural resources agency and the U.S. secretary of interior, who is currently Bruce Babbitt. The secretary of interior is the chairman.

The commission members are to receive copies of the transcripts from the public hearings. The commission meets next 10 a.m., July 14, at the Tidewater Inn, in Easton Md.

Following the meeting, at 1:30 p.m., in the same building, the SRBC is to hold its last scheduled public hearing on the proposal.

The first hearings were held in New York last week and other hearings are scheduled to be held Wednesday in Maryland. (See the Lancaster Farming Calendar of Events.)

According to Richard Cairo, secretary and general counsel to the commission, comments made during the early hearings were similar to those received Tuesday during two hearings in Harrisburg — one held in the morning at the Pa. Game Commission headquarters, and the other in the evening at the SRBC headquarters on the east bank of the Susquehanna.

The morning session was held in an auditorium and about 150 people attended. The evening meeting saw fewer attend. However, space at the SRBC headquarters is limited. Some who attended the morning session also were at the evening hearing.

Opposition to the SRBC proposal focused on several points:

- That agricultural land contributes more water to the surface flows of the Susquehanna River Basin than it uses compared to other water users targeted for inclusion in a fee structure.

- That the SRBC doesn't have sound justification for holding that irrigated land is a 100-percent consumptive use of water.

- That the value of the end product from agricultural consumptive water uses (food) is very high, compared to most other uses, such as watering lawns.

- That more information and education on the proposal should be made available and that more time should be allowed for the public to understand the complexity of the issue and form opinions.

- That the economic impact to the agricultural community would be greater than to other businesses because the costs of production farming can not be passed on to consumers.

- That farming is a low profit-margin business by nature and additional costs in the form of registration fees, monitoring fees, or consumptive use fees would add to a very narrow ability for farmer survival.

- That any fees collected by the SRBC to purchase stored water would not benefit those paying the fees.

- That water storage alternatives suggested by the SRBC are not practical, or just don't make sense.

The attempt of SRBC regulations is to ensure that water demand doesn't exceed water availability.

According to the SRBC, as it stands now, if the Susquehanna

River were to drop to a flow of 1,250 million-gallons per day (the lowest drought on record), 43 percent of the water flowing in the Susquehanna would never make it to the Chesapeake Bay because it would be taken out and consumed by people, animals, plants and industry.

The projection is that, by the year 2010, 61 percent of the flowing water during a severe drought would never get to the Chesapeake.

In other words, growth in the basin has increased to the point that single entities drawing out and consuming large amounts of water are posing threats to the availability of water during drought and actually making it more difficult to maintain flows during low flows normally expected every 10 years.

The negative implications of an extremely low flow are many, but the actual experience is one the SRBC is attempting to avert.

Nevertheless, increased human growth in the basin can be expected to make water availability increasingly tighter.

The proposal by the SRBC would bring together for the first time a series of regulations that it has created since its inception.

The proposal consists of three major parts — the review and approval of water withdrawal projects; special regulations and standards; and hearing and enforcement actions.

But the proposal would eliminate a suspension for agriculture from compliance with a 1976 fee structure associated with its regulations for consumptive water use.

The fee structure is contained in a resolution separate from the proposed regulations. That was done because the commission can act on a resolution anytime without having to go through the procedures associated with a change in regulations.

Consumptive Use

"Consumptive" water use is that use which transforms water into a form that can not be returned to the flows of the basin.

Fees collected in lieu of some other water conservation measures to make up the difference in water needed during low flow periods are to be used for the purchase of stored water in reservoirs located within the basin.

If an entity registered to withdrawal water from the basin for consumptive use could not create an emergency backup water storage system for use during drought, or find a way to reduce water consumption below 20,000 gallons per day, on a 30-day average, then they would have to pay a make-up fee of 14 cents per 1,000 gallons used on a year-around basis.

In the proposal, agricultural consumers would only have to makeup half of what they used, or pay half the rate on a year-around basis.

That consumptive fee structure also would essentially be a cap on the size to which an agricultural operation could grow without having to make compensation for its water use.

In a public hearing handout compiled by John McSparran, SRBC chief engineer, the consumptive use regulation would require agricultural operations which consume more than 20,000 gallons per day to make some form of compensation for the water.

As an SRBC-provided guideline, those farms which would exceed the 20,000 gallons per day threshold would be those who spray irrigate six acres or more at a rate of 1-inch per week; livestock operations with 2,000 or more feeder hogs, or 600 sows in a farrow to finish operation; poultry operations with more than 260,000 layers, more than 590,000 broilers; and dairy operations with more than 500 milk cows.

Some earlier reports of estimates ranged.

Paul Swartz, SRBC executive director, said that according to the data they've been able to review, the total number of agricultural operations which would be affected by the consumptive use proposal would be from 500 to 600, out of the 30,000 or so farms estimated to be within the basin.

Furthermore, he said these are the larger more modern farms, implying that they carry a higher negative impact on the environment, rather than the historic family farming operation that the general public, by voter referendum, has supported through farmland preservation efforts.

It was then argued that size of an operation doesn't convey an ability to pay.

In response to questions about the accuracy of the SRBC's projections for water use, Swartz said the commission staff will "consult with land grant universities in the member states" to get a second opinion.

Application And Monitoring Fees

The other part of the proposal includes a one-time application fee and then annual monitoring fees. Funds collected from those fees would be used to cover the costs of monitoring and administration.

The application fees apply on a sliding scale, depending on the amount of water involved.

Under the proposal, there are a wide range of cases of water use projects which may require application to the SRBC and monitoring. In fact, under proposed Section 803.21, there is wording that provides that anyone uncertain as to whether or not they need to apply for water withdrawal may ask for a "preliminary consultation" to find out if they will have to apply and monitor the use.

Of immediate concern in the application process to agriculture are those projects of consumptive use of 20,000 gallons per day or more; and those withdrawing, but not necessarily consuming more than 100,000 gpd on a 30-day average.

There are also spelled out some special cases, such as is involved in a water project involving crossing state borders.

The one-time proposed fee for application of a project to consume 20,000 to 100,000 gallons of water per day would be $750. The application fee for those seeking consumption of 100,001 gpd to 500,000 gpd would be $3,000. Projects using 500,001 to 1 million gpd would be assessed a $6,000 fee.

Those seeking to use more than 1 million gpd would have to pay $12,000 as a one-time application fee.

The annual monitoring fees would be $100 for uses of 20,000 to 100,000 gpd; $500 for uses of 100,000 to 1 million gpd; and $1,500 for uses exceeding 1 million gpd.

Public Water

The proposal would also affect public water suppliers. Previously, community water users were exempt.

However, the SRBC has changed its position to view the system as a single consumptive entity, using averages of individual water uses to calculate percent of consumption.

Many water companies would be forced to pay a fee.

David Modeer, vice president of the Pennsylvania-American Water Company, and representing the American Waterworks Association, testified that the proposed rules are unnecessary and that the projections of community consumptive uses are greatly overstated.

He also said that the people he represents want to continue the exemption they currently enjoy; that public water systems are not consumptive users because all they do is provide a system of getting water to the consuming person at the end of the faucet; that the companies can not raise water rates to reflect the increased costs without government approval; that an effective date is not spelled out; that the proposal is counter to the push by DER for water companies to regionalize; that transfers of registered water consumption should be allowed for the water companies desiring to regionalize.

Still Time

There is still time to provide comment on the proposal. Copies of the proposal are available through the SRBC, and it was published in the June 8 Federal Register, Volume 59, No. 109, starting at page 29563.

Otherwise, comments should be submitted not later than August 1, to: Richard A. Cairo, General Counsel/Secretary, Susquehanna River Basin Commission, 1721 N. Front St., Harrisburg, Pa., 17102-2391.

Pa. Holstein, PSU Dairy Science Club Join Efforts

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Penn State Dairy Science Club and the Pa. Holstein Association have announced that they intend to jointly sponsor the 11th Nittany Lion Fall Classic Holstein consignment sale, set for Nov. 5, 1994.

After last year's sale averaged $1,963 on 70 Holsteins, this year's sale committee is looking forward to selecting cattle and managing the 1994 Fall Classic sale. The sale managers and selection committee are to visit Holstein breeders in the next few months to select cattle.

For the 1994 Nittany Lion Fall Classic sale, Jen Trout, of Forest Hill, Md., is overall chairman, and Cathy Pavelski, of Susquehanna, is assistant.

Chairing the selections committee are Andy Foster, of Petersburg; Thad Sturgeon, of Fombell; and Sue Cadwallader, of Salem, N.J.

Other committee chairs include Jen Hummel, of Duncannon, advertising; Peter Mozes, Greenville, publicity; Terry Martin, Chambersburg, finance; Amy Marshall, Elwood City, reception; Rodger Keith, Martinsburg, arena preparation; Adam Tanis, Centre Hall, barn manager; and Owen Bewley, West Chester, animal preparation.

Dairy Science Club members use the Fall Classic as an educational experience. The sale provides first hand experience in selecting, financing, merchandising, preparing, evaluating, and managing dairy cattle. Last year, more than 50 students were involved in the sale.

The goal for this year's sale is to select approximately 75 top quality springing heifers and young cows. In addition, a select group of pedigreed calves will be sold.

What They Said

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Testimony provided by representatives of the state's two largest agricultural organizations, and the state Department of Agriculture, support the efforts of the Susquehanna River Basin Commission in attempting to deal with a difficult problem, but seek to eliminate production agriculture from being included as a major cause of water flow problems.

During testimony presented at a SRBC public hearing on Tuesday, on behalf of the state Department of Agriculture, David Bingaman said that the SRBC should not impose fees on agriculture.

"The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's review of the proposed ... regulations indicates that many farmers within the basin will be unaffected by the regulation.

"Nevertheless, the impact for those operations affected by the regulation would require significant payment or the provision of makeup water by the operation.

"In light of the significant impact on the operations affected by this regulation and the seasonal nature of agriculture, we fell an expanded comment period would enhance the ability of the agricultural community to provide meaningful comments to SRBC.

"During this period, SRBC should provide outreach and information to the regulated community through the Cooperative Extension Service, agricultural publications and public meetings."

Bingaman went on to explain how the PDA appreciates the concessions to agriculture already included in the proposal.

However, he said that conservation practices by farmers, and the fact that farmland contributes greatly to the stability of basin flows by keeping large areas of land available for rainfall to recharge the groundwater should be taken into account by the SRBC.

"The gradual release of stormwater from agricultural lands is preferable to the end-of-pipe stormwater discharges from urban or suburban systems.

"A regulation that further constrains production agriculture in this basin may in fact not be in the best interests of water quality or quantity."

William Adams, director of natural resources for the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, has served on the SRBC Agricultural Advisory Committee for two years.

In Adams' testimony, he said the PFB opposes the proposed fees to agriculture, that agriculture should be exempt from consumptive use regulation, and that the comment period should be expanded.

"PFB supports the water registration requirement contained in the proposed regulations. PFB also supports the regulations that allows for the transfer of a certificate of pre-compact use to a subsequent agricultural owner. Unfortunately, these areas of agreement are overshadowed by the fee issues."

On behalf of the Pennsylvania State Grange, Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director, reiterated the Grange's policy on water allocations and agriculture.

She said that the Grange "... recommends that any legislation passed make clear agriculture's rights to water ... that any farm be allotted a full allocation of water for the purposes of food production."

Shambaugh also said that the SRBC keep in mind the benefits of agriculture to the basin in conserving water and providing for recharge; that fees are detrimental, and that a 50-percent credit toward the amount of compensation is appreciated, but insufficient.

"In conclusion, the Grange agrees that the SRBC should monitor water use in its jurisdiction. We suggest to you, however, that exorbitant fees are not the answer."

USDA Study: BVD2 Of Concern To U.S. Cattle

HYATTSVILLE, Md. — A U.S. Department of Agriculture study of a severe type of bovine viral diarrhea (BVD) suggests that the emergence of this potentially fatal disease in the United States could present a serious health threat to the cattle industry.

The USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service study was initiated following confirmation of this disease this spring in cattle herds in northwestern Pennsylvania.

Veterinarians investigating the Pennsylvania cases have confirmed that the disease was caused by BVD-Type 2 Virus. USDA researchers have identified BVD-Type 2 virus as having significant genetic differences from the milder form of BVD more commonly found in cattle across the country.

The Type 2 BVD virus has been found intermittently in the United States since the 1970s but had not been linked to outbreaks of severe disease.

The study, conducted by APHIS Centers for Epidemiology and Animal Health (CEAH), found that there is an epidemiological basis for severe BVD to become a disease of concern for U.S. cattle producers.

The potential for a disease problem exists because of the following factors: clinical cases of severe BVD have been documented in certain regions of the United States; many cattle are not vaccinated for BVD; the introduction of infected cattle into herds appears to be a risk factor; and the impact upon affected producers can be severe.

An estimated 42 percent of dairy producers do not vaccinate at all for BVD. Only 33 percent of all beef calves are vaccinated before weaning, and only 13 percent of cow/calf operations vaccinate cows.

BVD virus usually spreads into a susceptible herd through the introduction of infected cattle. High levels of cattle movement between U.S. herds increase the risk of BVD outbreaks. Once an unvaccinated herd is infected with severe BVD, the mortality rate can be high.

Severe BVD infection may cause cattle to have a high fever, anorexia, decreased milk production, occasional diarrhea and respiratory problems. This disease is transmitted to susceptible cattle through inhalation or ingestion of respiratory aerosols, saliva, nasal discharge, urine or feces from infected cattle. BVD is not communicable to humans and does not present a threat to other animal species.

To determine the distribution of BVD-Type 2, CEAH requested input about severe BVD from 29 state veterinary diagnostic laboratories located across the country.

Seven laboratories reported that cases of severe BVD had been confirmed over the last year in their states. Two of these states, New York and Pennsylvania, indicated that the number of severe BVD cases was increasing. Laboratories in Colorado and Washington reported suspected cases that were not confirmed.

Last year an outbreak caused by a similar Type 2 BVD virus occurred in Ontario and Quebec, Canada. Animal health officials in Canada reported that hundreds of herds have been affected with severe BVD and attribute a higher death rate in young and adult cattle to this disease.

Canadian information about BVD outbreaks in Ontario indicates that herds that were not vaccinated or were inadequately vaccinated became affected by the disease. Vaccinated cattle in Canada may have shown some of the clinical signs of BVD, but those herds did not experience high mortality.

Precautionary measures that producers can use to prevent a BVD outbreak from occurring in their herd include the following:

—Vaccinate the entire herd for BVD. Revaccinate according to the instructions on the vaccine manufacturer's label.

—Maintain a closed herd as much as possible by limiting the movement of cattle on and off the farm.

—Isolate newly purchased and sick cattle from the rest of the herd.

—Avoid overcrowding cattle and minimize any stress they may experience.

—Identify cattle that may be a persistent source of BVD infection and remove them from the herd.

Watershed Tour July 23

WALKERSVILLE, Md. — If you are interested in the Chesapeake Bay and want to understand what you can do to better protect your water supply, then come to the "We're All In The Watershed" Tour on Saturday, July 23.

The tour will be from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. and will depart from The Frederic USDA office complex at 92 Thomas Johnson Drive in Frederick, Md.

The USDA field offices are located in the North Amber (GTE) office complex. The building is a large red brick office building with black letters on the side that says "92 USDA." The buses will leave from the parking lot at 9 a.m.

The tour will give urban and suburban residents an opportunity to see what other landowners are doing to protect water resources. Participants will also learn what they can do as homeowners to protect local water sheds, which in turn support the vitality of the Chesapeake Bay.

It is the theme of this public tour that recognizes how little things we do can make a difference regardless of whether we are farmers or suburban homeowners. We also will recognize the positive actions many farmers, homeowners, and developers are already doing in the watershed.

Collective impacts of individuals can be very great. In Maryland, there are more acres in lawns than in corn. Management on lawn acres can have just as big an impact as what happens in corn fields. Since it is estimated that many homeowners over-supply fertilizers and pesticides, these effects can be significant.

Soil erosion is another issue that knows no problem-free interest group. Developments without erosion control practices on average can have soil erosion rates 16 times the rates on agricultural land in row crops with best management practices.

Individual responsibility is the key to managing environmental conditions. Each landmanager needs to become aware of how their day-to-day actions combined with similar actions by others can have big impacts on water quality.

An example of this was the use of fertilizer to melt ice during last winter. Many experts believe that most of the fertilizer used in this way very quickly found its way directly into streams by going down storm drains. It was quite normal for people at the time when this fertilizer was used not to think about the health of the Chesapeake Bay. Greater individual awareness of our effects on water quality will decrease the occurrence of similar actions in the future.

The tour includes a visit to a farm to see best management practices dairy farmers use to protect water quality. Practices such as nutrient management, conservation tillage, cover crops and integrated pest management will be discussed. We also will visit a development to observe how developers, county governments, and conservation districts protect water quality when a housing or industrial development comes into a community.

A talk will also be given on the importance of lawn management and home environmental stewardship.

The final part of the tour will be a program on home well and septic system management for the protection of groundwater resources. Each participant will be given an informational packet of ideas they can use on their own property and in their own homes.

All are welcome on this tour, including families, scout, or other youth groups, and children accompanied by an adult. If you are interested in attending this tour, contact the Monocacy Project office at (301) 898-0133 by July 15. The tour is free and lunch is on your own after the tour.

Who's Drying Up The Creek?

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — Charles Wertz, manager of the Lebanon County Conservation District, said he received a complaint Monday morning from a concerned citizen about an irrigator who allegedly had pumped dry a local stream that does or did harbor aquatic life.

According to Wertz, "It's not the first time that we received concerns about it being dried up, (but that was) during drier weather. And as I understand it ... (the irrigator is) required to maintain certain flows that sustain aquatic life."

While Lancaster Farming will not reveal the identity of the people and the stream involved in the situation, the issue is related to the efforts by the Susquehanna River Basin Commission to manage the use of water resources within the basin. (See story page 1.)

In this case, the Lebanon County conservation district manager said he's received more than one complaint of that specific stream being pumped dry.

However, Wertz also said that earlier complaints were made during the drought years of the 1980s.

He said this complaint is out-of-the-ordinary because drought conditions don't apply as a quick justification.

In addition, it was expected that heavy snows and subsequent groundwater recharge should have been sufficient to feed the stream flow to normal levels.

At the same time, Wertz said he considers the specific farm operator alleged to have pumped the stream dry as historically practicing good soil and water practices with the district.

According to Wertz, what may be happening to this specific stream is the increased taking of water from the aquifer feeding it by increases in development in the watershed.

Could It Be New Neighbors?

In many areas, homeowners individually or collectively draw from groundwater sources feeding a stream.

It sets up a scenario of a system of water use that can leave considerable gaps in normal stream-flow patterns:

- Water is drawn ready to drink from the ground (headwaters of the stream) and that which is not "consumed" is used for household activities which contaminates the water with soaps, and nutrient-laden debris;

- The water is sent to a treatment plant located far downstream from where the groundwater was taken;

- The treated water, a pollutant, rejoins the flow of the traditional stream much farther downstream in the streambed, returning a portion of the flow taken from the ground to that point.

("Consumed" water means water that is made no longer available to the stream flow. It includes a portion of drinking water, water turned to steam or vapor such as in drying clothes, and water used to irrigate household plants, such as lawn grasses and trees.)

The effect of the residential well withdrawals, in this more recent and growing system of residential water use, is to deprive that portion of the stream flow between the residential wells and the treatment plant from historic flows.

Further, since groundwater is basically protected from evaporation, drawing it to the surface and returning it downstream to a surface discharge exposes it to a higher chance of evaporation.

Over time, while a constant amount of water may be tied up in a specific cycle, certain phases of the water cycle become depleted, while other phases, such as that in the atmosphere become increased.

The result is that more water is lost for use during dry periods because the use of the system of taking groundwater (a natural water storage) and discharging it from treatment plants as surface flow results in higher evaporation rates at all times and much less stored water available during drought.

What it means to the portion of stream going past a farm located between the two points is significantly less water.

Residential developments also do not recharge the groundwater storage system efficiently, because rainfall is carried away by storm sewers.

It is not known what the effectiveness of storm water collection swales and similar water storage devices are in recharging groundwater, compared to pre-development conditions. That is more of a site-specific determination.

In other words, anyone living along an original streambed, between the well-supplied homes upstream and the treatment plant downstream, could be deprived of very significant flows of water depending on the size of the aquifer and the amount of water being extracted from the groundwater upstream.

In the case of the recent allegation that an irrigator pumped a stream dry, Wertz noted that there have been some significant amounts of residential development near the farm since the droughts of the 1980s.

Wertz said he wasn't sure that the residential homes in the specific area are in fact creating the natural-streambed bypass system of aquifer-home, home-to-treatment plant, to-downstream discharge system.

However, he said it's definitely a possibility.

While such a situation would seem to call for some sort of correction, such as requiring the treatment plant to pump the effluent for discharge at a single or multiple points back upstream, near the point of original water extraction, in order to preserve the historic uses of the stream, such is not the case.

In other words, the farm operator who has been a regular irrigator may appear to be the culprit in the low flow of a stream, where in reality, it is the residential development and treatment system which is depriving the stream of its natural flows.

If the waste-water treatment facility were to be required to return its effluent to a point upstream that would allow a significant portion of the water withdrawn for residential use to be returned to the historic streambed, the irrigator conceivably would have access to a more normal and consistent flow.

Furthermore, the farmer wouldn't have the general public pointing fingers at him because all they see is a dry streambed and irrigation equipment.

But dealing with the real-world situation of the complaint that While the hypothetical farmstead located along Stream A in the diagram has historically drawn water to irrigate fields during time of low flows, the aquifer feeding the stream is tapped by residential development. The groundwater in any aquifer feeding surface flows is the long term storage for that stream. Release of water from the aquifer may normally takes weeks, months and years, depending on what part of the aquifer is studied. However, the aquifer provides long term storage that maintains a surface stream flow. Without the long term storage, streams run dry, or surface flows become too insignificant to support the aquatic life that has historically been present. Residential communities seeking water sources have actually been encouraged by the Pa. Department of Environmental Resources to avoid surface water sources for potable water and to draw from aquifers. In the meantime, the DER has also pushed for the construction of waste water treatment plants. The effect has been that more and more of the natural long term water storage for a stream is diverted into homes long before it would have normally been released into the streambed. Furthermore, the result is a bypassing of flows from the natural streambed. The arrows indicate the flow of aquifer water through homes, through community sewage to the waste water treatment plant, and into the natural streambed at Stream B, well below where flows are needed in Stream A. However, the public, and the law, only sees the low flow in Stream A, and the farm.

Wertz has received, he is not in a position to point fingers at anyone except the farmer, if the farmer is technically in violation of the wording of a permit.

In many cases, there is no substantive data to support claims of reduced water flow, because a normal flow (over a significant amount of time) has never been recorded.

Recording Flows And Keeping Streams

It raises a question of doubt that effective control of a stream's flow could be supported without having records that establish normal flow.

This situation is also reasoned to be occurring more frequently over a greater area than generally considered.

A problem with this type of situation is that there hasn't been an effective system of water flow monitoring or regulation at the small feeder stream level. The SRBC has called attention to the fact that it intends to increase such efforts.

Though charged with the responsibility, agencies such as the state Department of Environmental Resources or the Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission, have not concentrated funds adequately for field personnel or for equipment dedicated to monitor stream quantity or quality.

And federal agencies, such as the U.S. Geological Survey, which have established and maintained a number of water flow monitoring points within the Susquehanna River Basin, are looking at cutting efforts, because of reduced funding.

Other problems with managing fresh water streams is the general public's lack of knowledge about what they are and how they work.

Similar to farmers' complaints that, if consumers knew more about how their food was produced, they would appreciate agriculture more, water experts have to deal with a public largely uneducated about from where their water comes and the factors which affect its safety, dependability and quantity.

Healthy Streams Clean Water

While many may not understand the specific features of aquatic life in a fresh water stream (or system), it is such that the benefit to people of a "healthy" stream is its ability to absorb and treat pollutants such as excess nutrients from human waste without the expensive costs of creating a treatment system to the point of achieving similar purity.

In other words, "healthy" streams are self-cleaning and can offer dependable sources of clean fresh water.

In fact, all waste-water treatment facilities operate on the premise that whatever can't be cleaned out of the water at the treatment plant (because of level of treatment and funding) will be cleaned out by the stream.

Aquatic plants and animals function very similarly to composting operations, but provide clean potable water, instead of a ready-to-use healthy soil amendment. In addition, the products of both systems can support a vast array of living organisms and thus, produce significant amounts of human food.

The range of ability of a stream to recover from extreme conditions, such as heavy doses of nutrient pollution, low flow, excessive heat, siltation, chemical contamination, and severe flooding has limits, based on the nature of each stream's surrounding watershed and the types of aquatic plants and animals occupying the area of moving water.

As a general rule of thumb, all that is required to essentially "kill" a stream of its ability to purify water is just one day of exceeding one of several of the stream's limits.

For example, overheating a stream, through the removal of shade trees or brush over an extended length, by widening, or by removing a significant amount of the stream flow during hot weather, can result in the long term "death" of any stream.

The ability of a stream to recover naturally from such treatment depends largely on the health of "sister" streams, headwater flows, and the body of water to which the stream of concern flows.

In effect, what happens is that a portion of a stream can be temporarily sterilized until conditions improve to the point that surrounding life forms can recolonize.

If no local source of aquatic life is available to recolonize the sterilized area, the stream effectively can never again regain its ability to

NEWPORT (Perry Co.) —

While celebrating the 50th anniversary of its founding, the Pennsylvania Dairy Goat Association held its annual show to select breed champions and "Miss Pennsylvania" and Best Doe of Show winners last weekend at the Newport Fairgrounds in Perry County.

Two judges select Best of Breed winners in separate rings, but they select Miss Pennsylvania together. The judges this year were Judy Quigliana of Westfield, Miss Pennsylvania, which must be bred and owned in Pennsylvania, was Poet Hill Genuine Risk, exhibited by Susan Meas of New Albany, PA. Both judges also chose this Nubian as Best of Breed, and Judge Quigliana made her Best Doe of Show.

Best Doe of Show in Judge Baker's ring was GCH Stump Hollow TS Bonjour, an Alpine shown by Joan Stump of Telford, PA. Bonjour was Best of Breed for Alpines.

USDA Upgrades New York's TB Status

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has raised the status of New York to "accredited-free" in the national eradication program for bovine tuberculosis.

"We commend the cattle industry, state animal health officials and private veterinary practitioners of New York for working together to restore the tuberculosis-free status of their state," said Donald Luchsinger, acting deputy administrator for veterinary services in USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection services.

New York first obtained accredited-free status in the National Cooperative Federal-State Tuberculosis Eradication Program in 1980. An outbreak of bovine tuberculosis in farm-raised cervids (deer and elk) spread to cattle in 1992, causing New York to be downgraded to modified accredited-free status in the program. Intensive efforts to depopulate infected herds and to conduct widespread testing and extensive epidemiological investigations over the past two years restored the state's accredited-free status.

USDA designates each state's status in the eradication program based on evidence of freedom from tuberculosis in cattle and bison, the effectiveness of the state's tuberculosis eradication program and the state program's compliance with national standards. To attain "accredited-free" status, a state must not find cases of tuberculosis in cattle or bison for at least five years. To have accredited-free status restored, a state must not find new cases for at least two years and must meet other program requirements. Including New York, currently 42 states have accredited-free status.

Cattle or bison that are from accredited-free or modified accredited-free areas and that are not known to be affected with or exposed to tuberculosis are eligible for interstate movement without restriction or testing requirements. Restrictions apply to cattle and bison from nonmodified accredited areas with a higher incidence of tuberculosis. The owners of the 21,000 cattle herds in New York stand to benefit economically from the upgrade, as many national and international buyers prefer cattle and bison from accredited-free states.

Bovine tuberculosis is caused by Mycobacterium bovis, which can cause disease in many animal species, including cattle, bison, deer and elk. Although the current resurgence of human tuberculosis is caused by a different bacteria than M. bovis, humans can contract bovine tuberculosis by breathing respiratory excretions from infected animals or from drinking unpasteurized milk from infected animals.

Ag Department Issues Disaster Guidelines

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Lewis R. Riley has announced that the Department of Agriculture has produced a pamphlet outlining steps all horse owners need to take to protect their horses during the time of a natural or man-made disaster.

"The key to protecting your horse is to plan in advance for an emergency. By planning ahead, you can increase your chances of saving your horse's life," Riley said.

The pamphlet outlines specific steps all horse owners should take before, during and after a disaster occurs. They include evacuation plans, permanent horse identification, and the preparation of an emergency kit.

It is important to have enough fresh water and hay on hand for 48-72 hours. Maintaining good records and having them with you can help in documenting ownership when claiming lost horses.

"I think every horse owner will want a copy of this emergency action pamphlet for horses. Its simple step-by-step approach can help you come up with an efficient check list for protecting your horse. More and more people are taking seriously the need to plan for any eventuality. We hope this little brochure will help all horse owners," said Riley.

For more information on horse safety during disasters or to obtain a copy of the brochure, send a self-addressed envelope to the Maryland Department of Agriculture, Office of Food Safety and Consumer Services, 50 Harry S. Truman Parkway, Annapolis, MD 21401, (410) 841-5782.

Best Doe of Show and Miss Pennsylvania winner is Poet Hill Genuine Risk, shown by Susan Means of New Albany.

GCH Stump Hollow TS Bonjour was also named a Best Doe of Show for Joan Stump of Telford.

No Such Thing As 'A Day In The Life Of A DHIA Technician'

Like many technicians, Brooks says testing clients often become as much friends as professional associates, because of the regular monthly visits. Technicians get to know newborn babies, watch families grow up and marry, children return home to help farm, and experience with their farmer clients both life's joys and tragedies - as well as the day-to-day routine, and sometimes not-so-routine, farm occurrences.

"I care about my families," emphatically says Brooks. "I've gotten real close to some of them."

One Amish family in particular that Brooks learned to know well through her technician role has become especially close to her after a family tragedy. Their young son was hit by a car one morning while she was testing the herd. She later visited him frequently during his hospitalization, watched him improve from his injuries and was part of his first visit home during recuperation.

"I cried with that family," she relates. "And now I'm testing for their second generation."

A FAMILY EFFORT

Gerald Pratt tested his first dairy herd 35 years ago; except for a five-year stint of service with the military, he has been at it ever since.

When his Bradford County DHIA circuit reached its peak in herd numbers, Pratt was testing 47 herds. Although several were the alternating A.M./P.M. or owner-sampler types, Pratt still could expect to work "twenty-nine and a half" days a month.

"I hired some help to do all my herds and it was also a family effort. When our two sons were younger, we worked on it as a family project, especially if we had plans to do something special. My wife also helped; she's done a lot of paperwork and reports for me," relates Pratt.

To schedule the important family time that technicians often find hard to arrange in their variable job schedules, Pratt always tried to set Saturdays aside for family activities, even if it was just to chop wood with their sons.

In earlier years, farmers did testing more just for their own information, Pratt believes. Now, official test information is an absolute necessity for herds merchandising, especially through the export market, and for sire proof data. Forage testing, also once a much-utilized part of the DHIA testing program via kits that technicians had available, is now mostly handled by feed firms and nutrition consultants.

"Information is more precise now," figures Pratt. "Farmers seem more willing to ask for advice than they did in the past; but if farmers know you, they're usually willing to consult and ask your opinion."

"Most of our farmers are like family," he says, emphasizing that from a professional and official records standpoint, "we don't do favors to help them."

Through his long tenure with DHIA, Pratt has seen numerous changes. Technicians once ran all their own butterfat samples on home centrifuges; later, Bradford County had a central lab where the three technicians worked together to run samples. In 1973, all testing was centralized at Penn State.

The newest change, to computerization, has been a challenge for Pratt, who notes that he never had any typing background and he is still working on mastering computer skills.

Once, while he was testing for a herd, the son flew over the farm in an airplane and spotted his car outside the barn. Pratt laughs, remembering how the son called home that night, to his father's surprise, to ask how the cows had done on test. And, he once received a gift from a farmer - a live rooster.

From Pencil To Computer

Crawford County technician Jane Kashner began her employment with DHIA 17 years ago, when her husband's lung problems put an end to the couple's job as dairy herdspeople.

PIG SAVER "DUTCH CRATE"

Developed through testing in our research farms the goal was to develop a crate that nearly eliminates crushing, due to lay ons, unmatched durability and be easy to work around. All this has been achieved by a unique gravity fliprail that forces sows to lie down slowly and using stainless steel for rear doors and legs, proven horizontal and solid steel rod construction. All this at a reasonable cost. Crate also can be installed on an angle.

300 Sow Farrow - Feeder Pig Unit

CONFINEMENT STALLS

Developed in our R&D farm. Our goals were convenience, safety and durability. The low back and flat top rails are easy to reach over with no sharp edges. Stainless steel rear legs and front feet along with solid steel horizontal rods through punched uprights provide the strongest, most durable stall ever produced by Tri-County (21"-24" O.C. x86")

2800 HP Offsite Nursery (7 Rooms)
(Pull Plug, Preferred Ceiling Ventilated)

NURSERY PENNING

Nursery penning has been improved by the use of an optional solid stainless steel panel on the front gates which keeps walkways clean. Stainless steel feet on penning eliminate corrosion where penning attaches to the floor. Stainless steel drinker pipes & mounting brackets also increase durability.

FINISHING PENNING

Standard stainless steel feet and fasteners offer improved durability over other similar types of penning. Loop and flapper latch arrangement eliminates the use of drop pins. Stainless steel fence line feeders provide excellent durability and a minimum of waste.

No Such Thing As 'A Day In The Life Of A DHIA Technician'

"I asked for the job, because I didn't want to leave working with cows," she explains. Though she began with 36 herds, she now averages just over 30, most with between 35 to 45 head.

Kashner and other technicians agree that the biggest change in recent years is the move in herd records processing "from pencil to computer." Children at some of the herds where she tests are especially interested in learning how the computer works. Another improvement, she believes, has been in the area of test quality, after the plastic bags once used for holding the milk samples were replaced with more durable plastic vials.

One major benefit of her DHIA job, according to Jane Kashner, is that it does allow some flexibility.

"I can adapt it to my own way of life a little, like testing a smaller herd on a day when something else is going on," she explains. A chart near her phone, listing all her herds and pertinent information about them, helps her keep track of scheduling.

"Some days a farmer just doesn't need one more person there or another thing to do," Jane acknowledges, with the understanding that DHIA testing may sometimes be inconvenient. "We ask our farmers to call several days ahead if they have a wedding, a graduation, a vacation coming up. I have had very few refusals over the years; they tell me if there is a problem and we work it out.

"I've enjoyed it all," she reflects of her job. "You share a part of people's lives. I've tested when there was a death. And I've tested on a morning when a farmer practically floated around the barn because he was to bring his wife home from the hospital with a new baby. One farmer I used to test raised peacocks. I've seen hot air balloons. Things you see going to a farm, the sunrises, the sunsets, the wildlife, are enjoyable. I just like the farm and the farm way of life, and this job has helped me continue being close to that."

It's Five A.M. - Do You Know Where Your Technician Is?

Ken Mowry didn't. Scheduled for DHIA testing, the Mowry herd was ready and waiting early one morning during last winter's bitter cold spell. But Angelique McDonald, one of two technicians on the team that tests the large Roaring Spring herd, had not shown up on the farm. A call to her home sent the whole family out on a search.

"I had car trouble on the Route 220 by-pass. There are three ways to get to the Mowrys from our home farm; the way I went was the last way anyone looked," recalls Angelique. It was Ken Mowry who finally found her, fortunately before she had begun a long walk through sub-zero temperatures.

A four-year DHIA technician, Angelique grew up on the Galen and Sonja McDonald family's Guernsey farm at Imler, and like many of her testing peers, had a broad background in dairying. She learned the finer details of the job, however, from a friend who was a technician.

"I like working with dairy farmers; I consider them family and friends," says this former county dairy princess and Guernsey queen. Average size of her 26-herd Bedford County circuit is 60-70 head in the milking strins. Angelique also helps substitute in surrounding counties, and is part of a three technician-team which monthly spends eight hours testing the 1400-head Evergreen Farms in Huntingdon County.

Angelique is enthusiastic about the switch to computerization, even though the hardware once failed before she returned home from testing a herd, and she lost all her data. She returned to the farm and re-entered all the information from the worksheets with a computer borrowed from another technician.

At 23, Angelique's youthfulness has not been a problem in her work with dairy families, who often share with her their joys and concerns and seek her opinions. One farmer in another county where she substitute-tested did comment on her first visit that he had never heard of a "lady tester;" he was reassured after she explained how many technicians are women.

She also takes considerable teasing from her testing clients and jokes that she would be rich if she had a dollar for every time they ask her about when she is getting married. In fact, Angelique met her boyfriend while substitute testing in Blair County. They began dating after the farm wife at the herd she was working introduced her to one of their part-time employees.

Loves The Farm

Testing 36 herds in Indiana and Westmoreland counties and getting to see his nine-year-old son play ball in Little League game sometimes takes some juggling by technician Bob Edwards.

"I really appreciate my job. You can't find a better class of people than farmers," states Edwards, who marked his first year anniversary as a DHIA technician on June 18.

A former dairy farmer, Edwards used DHIA for his own herd and was familiar with the testing services available. He sees a lot of potential for the program's expansion in his testing area and often visits with farmers who might be interested in the cooperative's services.

"I can offer my time and knowledge to a dairy farmer; and I always try to remember before I leave a herd after testing to ask the dairyman if there are any questions that haven't been answered," says Edwards.

No Such Thing As 'A Day In The Life Of A DHIA Technician'

"I think the world of the computerization move," he says with enthusiasm, chuckling that he had no typing experience, started out as a "one-finger man" and is "now up to two fingers." But the speed of information processing allows him to have records printouts for clients' herds often before the meters have finished washing in the dairy house.

Edwards helped out on a Somerset County circuit for several weeks last winter and became especially fond of the many Amish families whose herds he tested. But his visits to the area so often coincided with bad weather that he suffered frequent kidding about his ability to bring blizzards. A regional DHIA representative who rode with him one day took no chances on Edwards' bad-weather reputation - and brought along his own snow shovel.

Reputation aside, his two-wheel-drive pickup only got slightly stuck once, while he retreated from trying to plow through high drifts on a road at Mt. Davis, highest point in Pennsylvania. But, part of the adventure of his job, he figures, is the "getting there."

"I love the farm," he insists. "Growing up on a farm and knowing how a farm family must struggle to make a living helps in being a technician."

Almost Un-Bear-Able Excitement Sometimes

"It's an exciting job. I like to see the new heifers and offspring of new sires come into my herds every year," says Wayne County technician Linda Wagner.

Linda originally began her DHIA career in Northampton County, then worked with her husband managing a herd before taking her present circuit, some 16 years ago. She currently tests 44 herds, many of them barns of 30-35 cows whose owners also hold off-farm employment. Three times each month, she double-shifts herds to accommodate the size of her testing circuit. Until earlier this year, she still tested one of the two goat herds that have been included in her clientele over the years.

Enroute to test one foggy, summer morning, Linda saw from the corner of her eye a streak of brown coming toward her small station wagon. A good-sized bear smacked into the driver's side of her car. She swerved, the bear rolled over and took off, leaving behind a hunk of skin and tufts of hair - plus a couple of thousand dollars worth of damage to her battered, but still driveable, Chevy Cavalier.

"I wasn't late for work," she relates, adding, "But I had all the windows down on the car but the one on my door; if it had been open, that bear's head would have been in my lap."

Linda has also heard coyotes howling and yipping not far from one of her test barns, thought she declined to join the farmer who took his flashlight to go look for them. And, on a memorable Fathers' Day morning, a Jersey bull came "sailing down the lane" toward her while Linda was loading her equipment in through the open doors and hatchback of her car.

Weather rarely slows Linda, though she always carries a shovel and blankets in her car during winter months and has dug her vehicle out of snowdrifts. On occasion, she has just stayed with a farm family overnight during extremely treacherous storms.

In addition to the obvious DHIA changes, Linda has watched many changes take place on her farms.

"They've gone from bucket to pipeline, begun using silage bags and trenches, are moving from tie stalls to freestall and parlors. Some are progressing toward changes in manure storage and disposal of milkhouse waste water," she observes. More quality forage is being produced in Linda's opinion. She also is saddened by the farms being lost as dairymen go out of business.

Though it all, she has been close to her testing clients, especially those family-farm operations. Through births and deaths, accidents and moments of hilarity, Linda, like the majority of the professional dairy herd testing technicians, connect beyond the mere testing aspect of DHIA by sharing moments of their lives.

"Our primary concern is our members and their economic survival and their ability to compete in the dairy industry," says Dave Slusser, general manager of the Pennsylvania DHIA. "Technicians collect information which can help improve profits for our farm families. Our member herds average 4,000 pounds more milk per cow than herds that do not do production testing."

In the life of a DHIA technician, fulfilling that commitment to the membership, an "ordinary day" probably doesn't exist.

They may start their jobs in the middle of the night - and end it in the middle of the next one. Weather, snarling dogs, angry bulls - and bears - may slow them, but rarely keeps them from getting to their clients' farms. They are professional information gatherers and processors, sounding boards on agriculture issues, listening ears for personal problems, may have to chase cats and the occasional inquisitive little kid out of their cars, all while providing a vital service to the dairy industry.

Pa. Council Of Co-ops To Sponsor Conference

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives (PCC) will once again host their annual Young Cooperative Leader's Conference on July 6 - 8 at the Ramada Inn, in Altoona.

A highlight of the conference will be a series of workshops and presentations by nationally known speaker, Dr. Ron Hansen of the University of Nebraska. Dr. Hansen will address a variety of farm family issues, including the importance of effective communications and listening skills. He will be sponsored by Nationwide Insurance.

"Nationwide's participation is extremely valuable to both the council and the young farmers in the Commonwealth," said Crystal Smithmyer, executive director of PCC. "Dr. Hansen is an excellent speaker with an important message regarding farm family relationships. Nationwide support allows us to offer this first-class workshop."

In addition to Hansen's workshops, participants will also learn about cooperative basics and spend several hours involved in a hands on "Management for Success" workshop. There will also be ample opportunity for fun and fellowship while swimming, picnicing or enjoying an ice cream social.

For more information about this worthwhile conference, please contact PCC at (814) 231-3010.

PCC is a statewide association of cooperative businesses owned and controlled by farmers and rural Pennsylvanians. Its membership includes major marketing and farm supply cooperatives, the Farm Credit Associations of Pennsylvania as well as rural electric cooperatives. Organized in 1933, PCC is the voice for agricultural and rural cooperatives operating in Pennsylvania.

cleanse water as well. The result is that subsequent incidents of toxic conditions can have an increasing and extended impact.

While the water issue is only expected to increase in importance, since adequate water is essential for life, how it will be resolved depends on the actions of people within the basin.

The amount and level of support for a rational, well-thought-out approach to dealing with the problem depends on the level of public education, financial support, and the goals and strengths of differing political and profit-making agendas.

In the meantime, Wertz said he expects problems to continue, but he doesn't have the full answer, just one for each individual concerned: "The water in our streams belong to all the citizens of the commonwealth," Wertz said. "So we do have an inherent responsibility to maintaining that resource for all residents of the state, when you are a (water) user."

U-TUBE LAMP & SUPPLIES

"...the biggest advantage of these lamps is the economic savings over the life of the bulb. #### ENERGY EFFICIENCY AND LONGER LIFE

Earth Light Collection lamps pay for themselves many times over by providing significant savings on energy, maintenance and replacement. Compared to ordinary incandescent lamps, Earth Light Collection lamps save up to 76 percent on energy. The $1.523, for example, will save $67* over the life of each lamp. What's more, these energy savings are compounded by savings on maintenance and replacement. With an average life of 10,000 hours, Earth Light Collection lamps last up to 10 to 13 times longer than ordinary incandescent lamps.

Elf Guards Farm Workshop

JOYCE BUPP

York Co. Correspondent

SEVEN VALLEYS (York Co.)

— An elf has been spotted on a York County farm.

But not to worry. Actually, the elf is a little statue that guards the picket fence enclosing a charming, small garden, entrance to The Elfin Studio.

Inside The Elfin Studio, located on a farm at Seven Valleys R2, Elizabeth Sowers is busy in her version of an elf workshop, designing and sewing handcrafted doll clothing.

"I love it," she says, with the ready smile of a cheerful elf whose work makes children happy.

Specialty item of the Elfin Studio is Elizabeth's hand-sewn miniature garments. She displays them surrounded by beautiful dolls and accessories that are also available. Here, a doll can be not only outfitted with a new dress, but also shoes, hats, furniture, even clothes trunks and small, handcrafted wire hangers.

Elizabeth began sewing doll clothes as a Chester County teenager; for her sister about 10 years younger than herself, using sewing skills she first learned in school.

"I never played with dolls that much as a child," she says. "Crafts were what I really enjoyed, so I was more likely to be making things for dolls or my own paper-dolls with cardboard and outfits

"Dana," a Gotz doll, is typical of the size and style dolls for which Elizabeth Sowers creates her fashion designs. The dolls have soft bodies and firm head and limbs with moveable joints.

Beautifully handcrafted doll clothing, attractive accessories and miniature furniture delight doll lovers — young and old alike — who visit The Elfin Studio.

In the garden entrance to her Elfin Studio, Elizabeth Sowers displays two of her Madame Alexander dolls, Hans and Gretel Brinker. These dolls, from the classic children's story "Hans Brinker and the Silver Skates," are made in a factory in Harlem, New York City.

cut from catalogs."

Elizabeth and her husband Dan live in the remodeled and expanded summerhouse on the Sowers family's farm. Before locating her business to their home, she had a stand at the Farmers' Market in York for marketing her doll clothing and accessories.

Most of the clothing that Elizabeth designs and sews is for the dolls in the American Girls or Gotz collections. These 18-inch tall, realistic-faced dolls have soft bodies with firm, moveable limbs, large sparkling eyes and soft, silky hair. The American Girls Collection is based on a series of books about girls in various periods of American history, with a doll for each series.

"These are the most popular dolls since Barbie and Cabbage Patch and they are only available through catalogs. They're a more traditional doll, which older girls like and they have a lot of accessories that are appropriate," Elizabeth explains.

Because they represent varying periods of American history, like Colonial and Victorian times, the dolls, their storybooks and their accessories are educational as well as fun for children to play with. Most of the costumes that Elizabeth sews are garments which would have been typical dress during the historical periods of time represented by the dolls.

"I can only make five or six outfits a week," says this detail-minded doll-clothing designer. "Most take at least eight hours; even on a simple dress, there is a lot of hand sewing."

Elizabeth's doll dresses include hand-sewn snaps for closing, rather than Velcro which she believes may snag the dolls' hair. Even overlooked seams are stitched down to lay flat against the garment at places where seams may be visible, like the inside of a ruffled sleeve edge.

"When I make doll clothes, I want them to hold together. They're made to be played with," Elizabeth emphasizes.

Hats are the finishing touch for many well-dressed dolls. Elizabeth searches craft shops and catalogs for doll hats, often difficult to find, then adds her own creative touches to match them to her handcrafted dresses.

Christmas and Easter seasons are extra busy at The Elfin Studio, as parents and grandparents shop for gift dolls or special dresses. Most of the time, though, the customers are girls who have dolls and want certain outfits for them, often saving their own money to purchase a dress or accessories.

Several times a year, Elizabeth exhibits at regional doll shows, events which help her stay in touch with changing trends in dolls. Antique dolls are very popular, she explains, especially bisque and old German dolls. Occasionally, a customer will show her an old doll that was rescued from a trash can. Any doll less than 60 years old is still considered a "modern" one. An "old" one would probably date to the late 1800s or early 1900s.

Both older Barbie dolls and some of the newer specialty Barbies are also very much in demand among collectors. And, while most of her sewing is for the larger dolls, Elizabeth does offer a variety of handsewn Barbie garments, too.

Though she is surrounded every day by dolls, Elizabeth only keeps a few very special ones for her own collection, occasionally dressing them in a favorite costume she has designed. Most of the time, she is too busy cutting, sewing and hand-stitching details on garments for the dolls of other collectors.

"This is a lifetime thing with me," says this doll "elf." "You must love it."

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

This 4th of July weekend we expect a visit from our daughter and her family who live near Atlanta, Georgia. They will stay a week and the two grandchildren will keep us busy I'm sure.

However, I was thinking about another July 4th week 40 years ago. When I looked over my 1954 diary, it made me tired just to read it. You see we had three children under five years old and the eight-month-old was crawling and walking around furniture.

Here are some things that I noted in my diary that week. My husband went deep sea fishing and his brother and I did the milking. I got up at 4:30 and had trouble finding the cows as it was dark and drizzling. The next day I cleaned 45 fish and froze them while Allen hoed tobacco.

From one o'clock to 5 o'clock we picked the last of the sugar peas and my mother and sister helped. The children helped to pull weeds from the lima beans and they were going to Bible School too.

It must have been a hot week as friends came every night to swim in the Conestoga River. Even I went in the water three times in one day — I must have worked in my swim suit. I canned cherries and made a jelly from a batch of currants that a great aunt gave me. Also I baked an angel food cake with chocolate chips and gathered seed peas as I've always kept our own seed.

Their grandmother gave the two oldest cap pistols for the fourth and we had eight cars in our meadow on the fourth as they came to picnic and swim. We made homemade ice cream quite often in our eight-quart freezer. I cut my daughter's hair and her aunts thought that she looked very nice.

Some folks came to shoot groundhogs. That is something that has not changed as we still have groundhog hunters.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Dear taxpayer.....

The envelope didn't exactly say that. It didn't have to.

Few of us fail to immediately recognize the connotations of a piece of mail bearing the return address of the Internal Revenue Service.

"Now what?" I grumbled to myself.

To the best of my knowledge, all the income taxes, all the self-employment taxes, all the employee Social Security and withholding, all the "dues" that were due had been paid - in full and on time. Based on experience, that still did not likely mean this was just a "have a nice day!" friendly greeting from the IRS.

An envelope like that one always instantly prompts that knot-in-the-stomach response that makes me want to carry such a piece of mail gingerly, between thumb and forefinger, as though it might detonate at any given moment. Back in the kitchen, I took a deep breath, ripped open the white envelope and read the introductory line.

"We changed your return - You are due a refund."

Well! This might be a "have a nice day!" letter after all.

The computerized communication informed us that our Social Security/Medicare self-employment tax had been incorrectly figured and that we were due a refund of $18.20. Listed below were the complete figures on which the computation had been made.

Then came the line: Overpayment of taxes - $20.20.

And a subsequent line noting a tax penalty of $2.00.

A ten-percent penalty for overpayment? Huh?

What a racket!

How many of us, do ya' suppose, could get away with penalizing someone ten percent for overpaying us? Or would even be gutsy enough to try it?

Now, I understand the logic of levying a penalty for underpayment. We've had a few of those already, too, and believe me, the penalty is figured at a fairly steep rate. Plus interest.

An 800-line phone number was listed on the communication for taxpayer assistance. The two-buck penalty was irrelevant - but the idea of it irritated me. I called. And called. And called. As expected, the only answer I ever got was the continuing beep, beep, beep of a busy signal.

It brought to mind a whole stack of government-generated mail that had arrived over a two-day span, just prior to the arrival of the money-back greetings from the IRS. These were from a federal agriculture agency, listing dollar amounts we had received through a particular program.

Every single one of the nine identical notices came in a separate envelope and every single one bore the same dollar amount we had received: $0.00. And, every single one came first-class-mail, postage paid by..... you, the taxpayer. And me, the taxpayer.

On our front porch is a white plastic planter filled with red-blooming impatiens. On Memorial Day, I stuck into that planter a small American flag, which catches the breeze and makes me feel good every time I pass it.

It reminds me of those who made the ultimate sacrifice over the past 200-plus years to keep this United States free - so that those of us who so wish can gripe, complain and poke fun at the waste in government agencies. Without finding someone at our door the next morning waiting to haul us away in handcuffs.

On this July 4th birthday weekend of our United States, may we remember and cherish that freedom.

(P.S. A day later, we received a check for our refund. It included an interest payment. Of 16-cents. Is this a great country or what!)

Fun And Games At Chicken Festival

GEORGETOWN, Del. — Competition was even hotter than the weather as more than 100 children and adults battled it out in the "Olympics of the Chicken World" at the 46th Delmarva Chicken Festival in Dover, Del. recently.

These games, called Chicken Capers, are an annual event at the Chicken Festival that are organized and presented by members of Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc.'s Allied Industry Committee.

The action sizzled as 14 teams from five of Delmarva's poultry companies and more than 40 children competed in the egg scratch, spoon race, sack race, egg toss, and wheelbarrow race.

Perdue Farms, Inc. and Townsends, Inc. were the big winners of the day in the relay matches. In the grow-out competition, Perdue came out on top with the winning team of Bill Brown of Hurlock, Md.; Gerard Graham of Bethany Beach, Del.; Dan Wenner of Selbyville, Del.; and Mike Evans of Frankford, Del. In the processing plant division, a team from Townsends dethroned Perdue, Inc., which had won the relay the last three years. Townsends' victory team consisted of Harvey Holden of Frankford, Del.; Linwood Waller of Millsboro, Del.; Madeline Jones of Seaford, Del.; and Freddie Reid of Milford, Del.

The children got into the spirit of the Chicken Festival as they searched for nickels hidden in a huge pile of cornmeal in the "Chicken Scratch." Brian Rowe, 4, of Selbyville, won the 3-to-5-year-old division, while Sade Carter, 8, of Seaford, Delaware, found 17 coins to take the 6-to-8-year-old division. Michelle Cannon, 10, of Bridgeville, Delaware, found 32 coins for the win in the 9-to-11-age category.

The egg toss produced a lot of fun, despite the occasional mess. In the 12-and-under-age group, Sade Jones, 8, and Donald Jones, 10, both of Seaford, Del., were the winners. The adult winners were Freddie Reid of Milford, Del. and Harvey Holden of Frankford.

The spoon race attracted the most participants and required several heats for each age group. Coming out on top in the 6-and-under division was Steve Orta, 6, of Milford, Del. In the 7-to-12-age group, LaQueen Johnson, 10, of Bridgeville, was the winner. The adult champ was Kenny Wilkins, a flock supervisor at Allen's Hatchery, Inc., had to battle competitors in seven heats for his win.

Independence Day.... July 4th — no matter what you call it, this holiday is in the midst of the picnic season.

Do yourself and your family a favor; make sure your picnics are safe, as well as fun.

Don't make your family sick by serving food that has spoiled in hot weather. It's easy to forget about food safety when you're having fun.

Picnics are leisurely affairs — you may decide on a game or a family walk before eating. So be sure to pack your food to keep it fresh for hours. Remember, the longer the time between kitchen and feast, the more important your precautions will be. Here are some tips on keeping your picnic safe for family and friends.

- Choose foods that don't spoil easily. Sandwich spreads and salads mixed ahead of time spoil quickly in hot weather. If you choose to take these foods, refrigerate all ingredients before assembling (including shelf table items), then combine ingredients and refrigerate finished dish. Pack the salad or spread in a container surrounded with ice or frozen commercial gel pack.

- Make sandwiches ahead and freeze them — place frozen sandwiches in the cooler or bag, sandwiches will thaw by lunchtime. (Pack lettuce, tomato, and mayonnaise in separate containers; add them to sandwiches just before eating).

- Freeze small cans of boxes of juice, yogurt, or applesauce — they will thaw by lunchtime.

- Pack cold infant formula in an insulated cooler with a source to keep it cold.

- Keep hot foods hot with a thermos or insulated dish.

- Have all foods cold or frozen when you leave the house. The colder they are, the longer they'll stay safe — this is especially important for meat.

- If you take food that will spoil easily, pack it in insulated containers with ice and have the food cold before you pack it.

- Always place your picnic basket in the shade. Never leave food in the car — temperatures can rise to nearly cooking levels in unshaded parking lots.

- Only take what you can eat. Perishable leftovers should be thrown away — they could make you very sick.

- If you are traveling a long distance to a picnic it probably would be better to take the basic ingredients and mix them up on the spot. They'll taste fresher and be safer for you. If you want egg salad, take hard-cooked eggs in their shells and open and mix them there. The same goes for tuna or potato salad — leave them sealed in their jackets or cans until you're ready to eat.

- Spreading out the food and getting it ready to eat is part of the fun on a picnic. Make chopping, mixing, and preparing are part of the ritual. There's always a little extra time for it while the meat is cooking or the game is finishing. So use those extra few minutes for safety.

- One last word of advice, when in doubt, throw it out. Keep your friends and family free from spoiled food.

'Berry' Delicious Recipes

July is berry month. It's when consumers can count on having those gorgeous blueberries, raspberries, blackberries and other types of bramble berries grow in abundance.

Berries are very perishable and must be refrigerated immediately after harvest.

Store refrigerated bramble berries in a shallow container with a loose covering such as plastic wrap. Do not wash berries before storing.

Just before serving, wash berries gently and quickly in cold water. Never soak berries in water or they will lose sugar, flavor, and color.

Berries are interchangeable in most recipes and may be substituted for strawberries in recipes.

Avoid using aluminum, tin or iron utensils or baking pans when using raspberries because the berries can turn from red to blue in color.

For more information on freezing and canning directions, contact your local county extension agent and ask for the "Let's Preserve" fact sheets.

Marci Harnish, the 1993-94 Lancaster County Dairy Princess, reminds readers that July is national ice cream month. It's a time when Americans can enjoy their favorite summertime snack.

However, there are many other dairy products that can provide refreshment during the hot and humid summer months. And now that the 4th of July celebrations are upon us, what better foods to use other than dairy products. They are nutritious (they provide 76 percent of our body's calcium needs) and are delicious!

For those July parties try the following recipe that has a twist — a twist of lemon that is. Lemon Streusel Cake is a recipe the whole family can enjoy, whether you serve it at a party or for a snack for the kids. And guess what? It also contains 3 dairy products. So this summer have fun, stay cool, and remember to get at least 3 servings of dairy products! Remember they do a body good.

LEMON STREUSEL CAKE

1 package lemon cake mix with pudding

Grill Promotion Has Veal Sizzling

CHICAGO, IL. — The veal industry expects a red-hot summer of '94. That's because a record number of participants plan to join the industry's 1994 "Veal. Discover The Special Choice" Summer Grilling Promotion. This year's event integrates retail, foodservice and industry partnership interests in veal's target market cities: Chicago, New York and Philadelphia.

The six-week promotion, from July 18 to August 31, includes:

- A four-week radio advertising campaign that allows retailers to insert store names twice within 60-second announcements;
- Six-week in-store displays of Summer Grilling promotional materials in at least 11 major retail chains;
- A six-week incentive-driven retail advertisement featuring program that rewards chains for increased veal sales over the same time period last year;
- A three week period during which 15 high profile, upscale restaurants in each target city will highlight a grilled veal entree; and
- A targeted print advertising campaign to support restaurant partners.

Additionally, Lawry's Foods will co-sponsor a grilled veal tasting weekend for consumers at selected retail stores. Retail efforts will focus on increasing sales of veal shoulder, rib and loin chops, according to Floyd Many, a veal producer from Hobart, N.Y., and chairman of the Beef Industry Council Veal Committee.

2 tablespoons ham fat

2 tablespoons jelly

1 tablespoon cider vinegar

¼ cup brown sugar

¾ cup water

Mix 1 tablespoon cornstarch into ¼ cup water. Add to sauce and thicken, slowly bringing it to a boil, stirring constantly. Reduce heat. If desired, add ½ cup raisins to sauce. Add slices of leftover ham to sauce and heat over low heat.

Everitt began his 4-H career in Hunterdon County in the Mount Airy Dairy Club (the second oldest Dairy Club in the state) in the late 1930s. He served as president of his club and won a trip to National 4-H Congress for excellence in his dairy project. He has three daughters and one son who were all involved in 4-H and who all together have a total of seven children of their own.

Everitt serves on the Hunterdon County Board of Agriculture and the Flemington Fair Board. He supports 4-H in an advocacy role in both of those organizations. His support has been instrumental in making and keeping the Flemington Fair a safe, and exciting educational event for Hunterdon County 4-H'ers. He spends a tremendous amount of time helping 4-H prepare for the fair and a tremendous amount of time at the fair each summer, making sure things run smoothly. His dedication to both agriculture and 4-H are outstanding and are greatly appreciated by the county 4-H youth, volunteers, and staff.

Miniature Horse Racing Is Growing Attraction

BETH MILLER

Cumberland Correspondent
NEW BLOOMFIELD (Perry Co.) — Mister Lee may be small, but he certainly is fast.

Mister Lee, a miniature horse owned by Rosalie Boyer of New Bloomfield, is so fast, in fact, that he may end up being one of the stars in the growing sport of miniature horse racing.

"The more people clap, the faster he runs," said Ed Fach, Mister Lee's driver.

Boyer, who also breeds miniature horses, said Mister Lee really showed his potential on Aug. 8, 1993, at Falabella Downs in Gettysburg.

He ran the fastest time ever for a miniature horse under 34 inches by trotting over the quarter-mile track in 1 minute, 21.39 seconds while pulling Fach behind him in a small two-wheeled cart.

Boyer said she hopes Mister Lee sets some more records this year. She also hopes her horse will help build more interest in the sport of miniature horse racing.

That interest slowly has been growing since the International Miniature Trotting and Pacing Association was begun in October 1992, Boyer said. She said one of her main goals right now is to form a chapter of that association in Pennsylvania.

Other states that already have miniature horse racing clubs are Florida, North Carolina, Texas, and Virginia, Boyer said.

To build interest in the sport in Pennsylvania, Boyer is trying to get more tracks in the state and this area sanctioned for miniature horse racing.

Boyer said her interest in miniature horses came years after she already had been interested in full-size horses.

"I've been around horses since I was 17, riding just for fun," she said. "My husband and I would buy quarter horses, keep them for a while, then sell them."

Today, Boyer has seven registered miniature horses. They include Mister Lee's mother, two of his full sisters, and a half-sister.

She said she started dealing with miniature horses in 1987, when she bought her first pair.

Boyer said she bought them just because she liked them.

Mister Lee is the only one of her miniature horses that she has raced. She had decided to race the four-year-old stallion because she didn't need him for breeding.

Her first year of racing last year was a real trial and error experience, Boyer said, but she and Fach had a lot of fun learning the basics, including the best system of harnesses to use.

All that improvising paid off, however, she said. She hopes the experience she gained last year will pay off some more this year since she has Mister Lee entered in a stakes race in Florida.

The racing season, which begins in May, could be pretty busy this year, if she is able to get more area tracks sanctioned for races.

In any case, Boyer said she plans to enjoy Mister Lee, even if it's just by practicing at tracks like the one at the Newport Fairgrounds or by showing him in local parades, where she plans to have him pull a miniature stagecoach.

Owner, Rosalie Boyer and Driver, Ed Fach get Mister Lee hitched up for the first time this season.

Farm Safety 4 Just Kids

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Parents are you concerned that 8,000 kids under age 14 die each year from preventable accidents?

Instead of saying, "Isn't that a shame," which doesn't remedy the situation, learn ways to prevent accidents.

Farm Safety 4 Just Kids in Lancaster County is holding a safety session at the Farm and Home Center on July 11, from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Sherry Burgers, program director for the national Farm Safety 4 Just Kids, will be the speaker.

Dr. Albert Price, who heads the Lancaster Chapter, said, "If a disease came along that affected one in four children, we would spare no expense to find a cure and be quick about it."

Price is distressed that so few parents attend these type of meetings, which are held to raise safety awareness and educate parents about safety precautions. Discussion is also being held about developing a safety camp for children.

This meeting is for any adult who cares about kids. There are no fees to join and you do not need to be a health professional.

For more information on Farm Safety 4 Just Kids, write or call Dr. Price, Roseville Pediatrics, Lancaster (717) 569-6481.

Farm Women 14

Our January meeting was cancelled on account of the snow. For our February meeting we had lunch at Bloomfield Square and then went to Erma Brubaker's at Landis Homes for our business meeting. No March meeting because of more snow.

We were entertained on April 13th at the Lutheran Church in Maytown by Society No. 8. They served us delicious hot meat casseroles, salads, and desserts brought in by their members — a real feast. The program listed as Musical Entertainment was presented by David and Sylvia Kuch. Old time songs, piano solo, and solos by David and Sylvia made a delightful program, and we thoroughly enjoyed the day.

The Spring Rally was held on May 11th at the York Fairgrounds. Ten ladies from our society attended helping Pennsylvania celebrate 80 years of Farm Women. In the forenoon we were entertained by Robert and Verna Kissinger, a comedy team. After a good lunch we sang old familiar songs. Our speaker, Joyce Bupp, told about Farm Women now and then. She took us back to the days when some of us used feed bags for pillowcases, sheets, aprons, blouses, and dresses. We also heard about canning meats, vegetables, and fruits in the blue, green jars. It was a really enjoyable day.

Our regular May meeting was held at the home of Helen Herr on the 26th. Hostesses were Mary Louise Landis, Elma Barge, Esther Landis, and Helen Breneman. After delicious cake, smackers, mints, and tea or coffee, our program was given by Mary Ellen Dula. She told about her life as a missionary nurse in Africa. Her talk was very interesting as most of knew her or her family.

On June 14-16, our group took a three-day bus tour to Boston, Massachusetts. The tour was well planned by Janet Leaman, one of our group. On Monday we visited Faneuil Hall, Quincy Market, and went to the top of the John Hancock Building to view Boston. We visited Parke Street Church and Filene's Bargain Basement. We had a cruise on Boston Harbor and toured Old Ironsides. With a guide on our bus, we toured the city and saw a film in the IMAX theater. We also saw the Mayflower II, Plymouth Rock, and toured Ocean Spray Cranberry World and saw the cranberry bogs. It was a great three-day sightseeing and educational tour.

Juniata County Crowns Dairy Princess

MIRIAM WERT

Juniata Co. Correspondent
MEXICO (Juniata Co.) — Walker Grange Hall was the site of the crowning of Melissa Kay Hostler as Juniata County Dairy Princess for 1994-1995. It was obvious that farmers and friends are loyal as many attended the event in the 90-plus degree heat on June 18.

Mistress of Ceremonies Nancy Toms started by thanking the hard-working committee and all who have helped the past year.

Becky responded by thanking all who had helped her, and especially her court of dairy misses and maids who had appeared with her in parades and helped at many special events. Becky found the year to be most rewarding and plans to be of help this year by serving on the committee.

Newly crowned Juniata County Dairy Princess Melissa Kay Hostler is the daughter of Larry and Deborah Hostler of RR3, Mifflintown. She has a brother, Danny. She is 17 years old and will be a senior at Juniata High School, where she plays softball on the junior varsity team. She is a member of the Port Royal Lutheran Church and of Teen Council. Missy is also a junior member of the National Holstein Association and serves as vice-president of the Milky Way 4-H Dairy Club and is a member of the club's judging team.

Missy's hobbies include showing her dairy animals and collecting cow items. Her family owns "Mel-K-Hos" farm where they raise heifers for re-sale. Missy owns 15 of the family's 30 heifers and also owns a milk cow that she shows all over the state. Including her grandmother, Gladys, the family has been on their farm for 40 years. They raise corn, hay, and oats on their 100 acres. Missy's mother is a milk tester in Juniata County.

Juniata County Dairy Princess for 1994-1995, Melissa (Missy) Kay Hostler, is crowned by the outgoing princess, Becky Woodward.

Juniata County Crowns

In her very first public speech, Missy told the crowd that she has been around cattle ever since she was small. She started 4-H at age 8 and started showing cattle at 9. The main theme of her talk was the dedication of the American dairy farmer.

She spoke of the wholesomeness of dairy products that furnish nutrients needed by the body. She challenged her listeners by suggesting that the next time they walk into the grocery store and pick up a gallon of milk and a pound of cheese, they should remember that they would not have those high-quality products to enjoy if it were not for the 365-day-a-year work and dedication of the farmers.

In addition to her speech, Melissa presented a skit titled, "Milk From the Cow To the Table." On the table before her, she had a small replica of a cow and of electric milkers, explaining the importance of cleaning the cow's teats before and after milking, and how the milk goes from the cow to the tank where it is cooled and then hauled away in a tank truck to be pasteurized and processed.

Missy's court is made up of dairy maids Tar Kocher, Danielle Mummah, and Ronda Mummah; dairy miss Sara Hower; and little miss Jada Faulkner.

Also attending the program in support of the dairy princess and to speak to the crowd were David Noss of RD, Port Royal, vice-chairman of the National Dairy Board, and Juniata County Holstein Club President Ronald Mummah. Bill Peoples, from the board which selects farms for the Dairy of Distinction awards, was present to give the award to Ronald and Desiree Mummah of RD, Port Royal, and Harold and Janet Shearer of RR, West Waterford.

Also present was Wanda Yoder of Belleville, central coordinator for the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services.

Give Up Ice Cream? Never! These Folks Love Ice Cream

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff
EAST EARL (Lancaster Co.)
— You've heard the rumblings about ice cream being high in fat.

According to some reports, you'd think eating ice cream is something that you need to hide in the closet to do. People may be cutting fat from their diets, but cutting out ice cream — well, that is one thing the majority of people are not willing to do.

"I'll cut fat in every area — but not ice cream," said Fred Loniewski of New Jersey. "I'm never without ice cream."

He was searching for new flavors among the ice cream section of Shady Maple Farm located in East Earl. Loniewski said that in his area it is difficult to find as many varieties of ice cream. He likes to come here and try as many as he can.

Ice cream is a favorite summer treat. It's been a hot couple of weeks and, according to Shawn Eberly, frozen food manager at the store, ice cream sales have soared.

One consumer remarked, "It's been so hot I've eaten about four tons of ice cream in a week."

Although she is conscious of fat content and mostly buys yogurt and fat-free sour cream and cream cheese, she said when people come to visit they complain that she doesn't have the good stuff — real ice cream. She purchased real ice cream just for her company and will stick to frozen yogurt for herself.

"People say that they are cutting out fat, but what we are finding is that they are cutting it out in all areas except ice cream," said Althea Zanecosky. "Ice cream consumption is really on the rise."

Shoppers at the market confirmed her findings. Even if their doctor has put them on a low-fat diet, they are inclined to eat their ice cream.

Said Vince Brancador of Reading, "You are talking to a person who constantly cheats. I've had open heart surgery. I cut out red meat and extra fats like potato chips and junk food. I eat fish and turkey, fruits and vegetables, but don't take away my ice cream — I need my ice cream."

His wife Connie agrees. "We look for low-fat varieties, but that doesn't stop him from eating the regular kind. In this weather we need it to cool off."

While Mary Wingate of Gordonville did her grocery shopping, she paused to buy ice cream cones for her three sons, Jake, 11; Ian, 7; and Nicolas, 4.

"I try to buy lowfat varieties for myself and the children, but my husband likes the real stuff. He cuts fat in other areas but not in ice cream," Wingate said.

"I'm never without ice cream," said Fred Loniewski of New Jersey. Althea Zanecosky, dietician for Dairy Council said that studies show that he is in the majority. People are cutting fat in other foods but they aren't willing to give up ice cream.

"You're talking to a person who constantly cheats," said Vince Brancador. His wife Connie looks for low-fat varieties because she likes ice cream as much as her husband.

The Wingate siblings Jake, 11; Ian, 7; and Nicolas, 4, enjoy ice cream cones.

Anna Ruth Beller pushes a shopping cart loaded with ice cream.

Carmella and Charles Esterly of Pottstown are not ready to give the pleasure of an ice cream cone even though Carmella is diabetic. "I must be doing something right," said Charles, who is 71, and said that almost every food he eats is a dairy product and he doesn't have high cholesterol.

Fun Facts About Ice Cream

Ice cream is a favorite summer treat, and it's consumed by most people in the country. Consider these interesting facts about ice cream and frozen dairy desserts.

- * U.S. ice cream consumption is highest in June and July.
- * Ice cream and related frozen desserts are consumed by over 98 percent of households in the U.S.
- * The top five flavors of ice cream in the U.S. are: vanilla, chocolate, strawberry, butter pecan, and Neapolitan.
- * The most popular ice cream toppings are: hot fudge, chocolate fudge, butterscotch, caramel and strawberry.
- * Here's some storage and handling tips for ice cream products.
- * Store ice cream tightly covered at 0°F or colder.
- * To avoid drying out the ice cream after the carton has been partially used, cover the surface of the ice cream with plastic wrap before reclosing and return to freezer immediately. For longer storage, enclose the carton in freezer wrap.
- * If partially melted, ice cream can develop a coarse texture when refrozen. Partial melting can also cause the ice cream to shrink in volume.
- * Follow these tips when serving ice cream and related frozen dairy products.
- * To soften, transfer ice cream to the refrigerator before serving. Allow about 10 minutes for pints and 20 minutes for half-gallons.
- * When using half-gallon containers, scoop ice cream from the center to the side of the carton.
- * To prevent ice cream from sticking to the scoop, rinse the scoop in running tap water.

still selling well. New novelties are flooding the market designed especially for baby boomers. It takes premium ice cream packaged in small bars or balls so that a diet-conscious consumer can indulge in a bite of ice cream instead of consuming what is normally considered a serving — but it still requires willpower not to consume more than one.

Francis Cutrona of Lewes, Del., was licking an ice cream cone. "I must watch my fats, so I don't eat it everyday," she said.

Her husband shrugged. "I don't care about cutting back on fat. One day they say this is bad for you and the next day it'll be good for you. I figure you are going to die anyway so you might as well eat what you like."

Carmella and Charles Esterly of Pottstown each purchased an ice cream cone. Although Carmella is a diabetic, she still eats ice cream although she searches for lower sugar varieties.

Her husband, on the other hand, always eats ice cream. "I'm not willing to give up ice cream, no matter what," he said. "There is hardly a food I don't eat that is not a dairy product. I'm 71 years old and I've never been told that I have high cholesterol. I must be eating something right."

While you can purchase your favorite flavor of ice cream at most stores, homemade ice cream is the best summertime treat for the family. It's relatively easy to prepare and provides family entertainment too.

Art Good is one of those people who thinks nothing beats homemade ice cream. Although he was licking an ice cream cone, he said, "It doesn't compare with the ice cream I made this weekend — vanilla with fresh strawberries on top."

Whatever flavor — ice cream promises to be a favorite for a long time.

July Ice Cream Facts

DID YOU KNOW . . .

** More ice cream is consumed on Sunday than any other day of the week.

** An average scoop of ice cream has only 160 calories, the same as a banana.

** Most ice cream is eaten in households where the main grocery shopper is between the ages of 35 and 54. Children ages 2-17 and adults 45 and over, eat the most ice cream per person.

** Though chocolate and strawberry rank high as consumer favorites — it's still plain old vanilla that leads the way in ice cream sales.

** Ten percent of the total milk produced in the U.S. is used in ice cream products.

Festival Has Hot, Successful Run

DOVER, Del. — It was a hot weekend, but most of the 21,000 visitors to this year's 46th annual Delmarva Chicken Festival here enjoyed themselves and learned more about the nearly $1.3 billion-a-year poultry industry on the Delmarva Peninsula.

Food was one of the high points of the festival. The wide variety of Delmarvalous chicken prepared in a variety of ways — barbecued, shish kebab, Oriental, or cooked in the "world's largest frying pan" in Mazola corn oil — made for a successful event.

A highlight of the festival was the Delmarva Chicken Cooking Contest with 20 finalists from the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic states. M. Lynne Armstrong of Wilmington, Del. was selected the top winner following a Saturday cook-off on the campus of Delaware State University. "Lime Salsa Chicken," an ideal choice for summer meals, was prepared on a gas grill, but it can be equally good cooked under the broiler for year-round enjoyment.

A first-time contestant, Armstrong took home a seven-day all-inclusive Caribbean vacation for two, $1,000, a Frigidaire self-cleaning range, and other prizes.

LIME SALSA CHICKEN
4 broiler-fryer chicken breast halves, boned, skinned
1/4 cup lime juice
2 tablespoons sherry
2 tablespoons light olive oil
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
Salsa: recipe follows
Avocado slices
Tortilla chips

In a large bowl or resealable plastic bag, make marinade by mixing together lime juice, sherry, oil, oregano, and garlic salt. Remove 3 tablespoons of marinade; set aside. Add chicken to remaining marinade, turning to coat. Marinate in refrigerator 1 hour. Remove chicken from marinade; reserve marinade. In small saucepan, place reserved marinade; heat to boiling and boil 1 minute. Place chicken on grill with rack about 8 inches from heat source. Brush marinade over chicken. Grill, turning and basting frequently with marinade, about 16 to 20 minutes or until chicken is fork tender. Arrange chicken on platter. Serve with salsa. Garnish with avocado slices and tortilla chips. Makes 4 servings.

SALSA: In a bowl, make salsa by mixing together 1 tomato, peeled, seeded and chopped; 1 green onion, sliced; 1/4 cup sliced black olives; 3 tablespoons reserved marinade; 1 tablespoon seeded, chopped jalapeno chili pepper; 1 tablespoon chopped cilantro; 1 tablespoon chopped mint; 1 tablespoon slivered almonds; 1/4 teaspoon salt; and 1/4 teaspoon pepper; chill. Makes 1 cup.

Lynn Armstrong was named the top winner in the 1994 Delmarva Chicken Cooking Contest held June 18 in Dover, Del.

Lime Salsa Chicken, Armstrong's prize winning entry, was prepared in competition with 19 other finalists representing Mid-Atlantic and northeastern sections of the United States. In addition to the honor, Armstrong received a seven-day Caribbean vacation for two, $1,000, a Frigidaire self-cleaning range, Cutco cutlery, LP gas grill, Proctor-Silex toaster oven, and a McCormick spice rack with spices.

The Delmarva Chicken Cooking Contest is sponsored by Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc., the trade association representing the poultry industry on the Delmarva Peninsula.

July Ice Cream Facts

** Americans consume about 44 pints of ice cream per person each year, more than that consumed in any other nation.

** Ice cream may be kept up to two months if stored at 0 degrees Fahrenheit or below. Tightly closed cartons of plastic containers with tightly fitting lids prevent drying, shrinking and ice crystal formation.

** One-and-a-half cups of ice cream contain as much calcium as a cup of milk.

** It takes about seven quarts of milk to make a gallon of ice cream.

** Pennsylvania's dairy industry is the fourth largest in the country and about one quarter of the milk produced in Pennsylvania is used to make ice cream products. This large production of ice cream makes Pennsylvania the second largest producer of ice cream for the Northeast and Middle Atlantic region.

** In 1841 Ralph Waldo Emerson said "We dare not trust our wit for making our house pleasant to our friends so we buy ice cream." Emerson's words continue to hold true today with more than 98 percent of American households consuming more than 450 million gallons of ice cream annually.

Greetings From Your Lebanon Fair Queen

Hello, my name is Jamie Irwin. Shortly my reign as the 1993-1994 Lebanon Area Fair Queen will be over. It will soon be time to crown the new 1994-1995 Queen. WILL IT BE YOU?

The is the reason for this letter. I would like to encourage all females, between the ages of 16 and 20, that have had or have some affiliation with the Lebanon Area Fair, and enjoy people, to consider becoming an entrant for this year's title.

The winner receives so much recognition and great prizes. She will be the guest of many parades and will compete in the state level at this fantastic convention!

This year's Lebanon Area Fair will run from July 30 to August 5. If you would be interested and would like more information, please call the fair office at (717) 273-3795.

I hope you consider being a contestant. I was crowned on Saturday evening, July 24, 1993, and my duties as Fair Queen began immediately. I handed out ribbons and congratulated the many exhibitors. I greeted and welcomed fair participants, visitors, and dignitaries. It wasn't very hard to smile, for I had a lot to smile about!

I was very proud and honored to fulfill the title. I received prizes from sponsors such as L'Gem, Tim McGowan Studio, Wertz Candies, Dunkin' Doughnuts, Nancy Thompson, and of course the Fair Board and their committees were truly generous. But my most rewarding prizes were the many smiling faces and warm hellos, the friendly handshakes and all the new friends I made while wearing the crown.

Being known as the Lebanon Area Fair Queen has created a great deal of pride and a memorable episode in my life. It has numerous pictures of my sponsors, my events, and the parades from the whole year as the Lebanon Area Fair Queen. If you get a chance, please stop by the exhibit building and check it out!

Once again I would like to thank this newspaper as well as the local radio and TV stations for their wonderful coverage of the Lebanon Area Fair. The media has been a very important factor in making the Lebanon Area Fair the success that it is.

I haven't forgotten the best chaperone a queen could have... thank you, Lorraine Royer.

I do feel that all the exposure and publicity I have received as the Fair Queen has helped me become a good public speaker, and has instilled a great deal of confidence and other qualities that will help me in my future.

After my graduation from high school this year, my goals are to attend a four-year college and study law enforcement/criminology. My search is on for the right college and I hope to earn the scholarships I will need to fulfill my plans.

Jamie Irwin

Recycle 'N

CREAMERY (Montgomery Co.) — Summer is here, and lawns have already greened up. You're doing a lot of mowing. But what are you doing about the grass clippings, tree and bush trimmings, dead weeds, leaves, and garden plants?

You can turn your yard waste into a valuable resource. How? Compost it! As landfills fill up and concerns about the environment grow, more and more people are discovering the magic of composting organic waste. Organic waste makes up 30% of all residential waste in many communities. The Recycling Education Program of Penn State's Montgomery County Cooperative Extension, came into existence to help educate people and organizations about organic material recycling and composting. The Recycling Education Program is funded by private and public sources.

What does composting involve? You can set up a composting area in your yard by mixing leaves, grass, and other organic materials into a pile at least 3 feet by 3 feet by 3 feet (no larger than 5 feet by 5 feet by 5 feet). If possible, choose a shady spot so

You Ask ? ? ? ? ? ? You Answer

In response to readers' questions, this column is for readers who have questions but don't know who to ask for the answers. In the past, many readers sent non-cooking requests to Cook's Question Corner, a cooking column on page B 8.

"You Ask — You Answer" is for non-cooking questions. The concept is the same: When a reader sends in a question, it will be printed in the paper. Readers who know the answer are asked to respond by mailing the answer, which will then be printed in the paper.

Questions and answers to this column should be addressed to You Ask — You Answer, Lou Ann Good, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522.

QUESTION — A. Nolt of New Holland would like to know the words to the complete poem that was recited in the 1920s when her father-in-law went to school. The poem contains these lines: The carpenter's house is falling down. The preacher's kids are the worse in town.... Since this request appeared, Theresa Litecky, Eastampton, N.J., and several others have written to say they remember parts of this poem and can hardly wait to see the complete poem. Any readers who remember the complete poem, please send it immediately.

QUESTION — Romaine B. Answell, Sumerdale, would like to know who manufactured the Webalco electric skillet.

QUESTION — A reader would like to know where you can send for a catalog featuring vinyl doll heads, arms, and legs. she wants to make her own dolls.

QUESTION — Charles E. Wright, Duncannon, purchased a 13-inch parlor stove made of iron with the following marks: On the front spark inside is written Gray Iron Casting Co., Mt. Joy, Pa. On the inside top door 75-11; on the poker 7517. The doors, drafts, etc., would like a full-sized stove. Is this company still in business?

QUESTION — A reader from Thorton writes that families of Canadian geese have taken residence in their pond. How can the geese be encouraged to leave the pond?

QUESTION — Barb Gayman would like more explicit instructions for a question she had asked previously. She asked what to do about food sticking to the plastic trays of her food dehydrator. A reader suggested that she line the trays with waxed paper. Barb did and the paper stuck so tight, it was not possible to remove it and resulted in inedible fruit. Another reader suggested she use rancid spray, but she is concerned that it will get rancid. Any other suggestions?

JOHN DEERE SQUARE BALERS

Packed with consistency, bale after bale

Here's a performance you'll like repeated again and again in your fields: solid, stackable square bales that hold in feed quality.

How do John Deere square balers do it? For starters, the low-profile pickup rides close to the ground to gather in more hay. And narrow-channel strippers help save leaves and short material.

Once the hay's in the baler, it gets packed solid as a unique design pre-compresses hay inside a tapered chamber. Feeder forks then fold the compressed hay into the baling chamber — delivering solid bales that stay together.

You can also count on a long, trouble-free life from your John Deere baler. Compared to others, John Deere balers are just plain beefier. Heavy-duty bale cases and a heavy, side-mounted flywheel — plus simple John Deere design and fewer moving parts — mean season after season of beautiful bales.

To turn your next hay crop into solid, square bales that stack like bricks, pick up a rock-solid John Deere Square Baler.

'Nature's Way' — By Composting

the compost does not dry out in the hot summer months. Also, put your pile in a dry area that does not puddle in wet weather. Make your compost pile with a mixture of about one part grass, or other green material like fruit and vegetable scraps, and one part leaves, or other brown material like wood shavings, hay, or straw. More brown material in a pile will compost slowly and more green material may start to have odors. Shredding the ingredients speeds the process. You can shred your leaves by running a lawn mower over them. Wood is very slow to decay and must be chopped into small pieces, by hand or with a chipper, before being added to your compost. Mix the ingredients well. Add water until you can squeeze no more than one or two drops out of a handful of the materials. If you do nothing more with the pile, it will take about a year to decompose into compost to use for mulching, adding to your garden or potting soil or house plants, or spreading lightly on your lawn.

Don't add lime to your compost; it may drive valuable nitrogen (a key plant nutrient) off as a smelly gas. If you need to increase the pH (compost usually finishes with a neutral pH), mix lime into the compost after it is finished.

Store-bought additives do no harm, but they are an unnecessary expense. The microorganisms that break down your compost are all around just waiting for a place to live and work. If you want to speed the arrival of these compost critters into your compost, mix a couple of shovels full of soil, finished compost, or manure into the compost pile.

If you spend a little more time and effort watering and turning the pile, you speed up the composting process. Keep the pile about as wet as a wrung out sponge (do the squeeze test described above). If the pile is a mix of brown and green materials is kept moist, and the weather is warm, it should heat up for the first few days. When it starts to cool, turn it with a shovel or pitchfork about every three to seven days. The more often you turn it after it has heated and cooled down and the more careful you are to keep the moisture at the wrung out sponge level, the sooner you will have compost.

Turning and keeping the moisture content right keeps the pile composting aerobically, that is, with oxygen. If the decomposition become anaerobic, or without oxygen, because of too much moisture or compacted materials, you may have a problem with objectionable odors. Grass is famous for this; that's why it should be mixed with a brown material like leaves or wood shavings. The odors can be eliminated by turning the pile and adding dry materials if the pile is too wet.

While composting in a pile works just fine, you can build a compost bin very inexpensively and easily. Bins can be surrounded with decorative fencing or flowering plants, especially if you have a small yard and prefer not to include a brown heap in your landscape. The wire compost bin plans accompanying this article are examples of easy-to-build compost bins. Over the next several months we will print other articles and bin plans, including plans for bins made of wood pallets, trash cans, wood and wire, and three-section bins. You can also choose from a variety of pre-made bins available at home and garden centers and hardware stores.

Montgomery County 4-H Fair Invites General Public To Enter Contests

CREAMERY (Montgomery Co.) — Have you ever been recognized for being a great sewer, quilter, or canner. Do you enjoy baking or crafts? Is your vegetable garden overflowing with veggies?

The Montgomery County 4-H Program invites you to show off the products of your hard work by exhibiting at the 4-H Fair.

Any Montgomery County resident may enter an item in the "Open Classes" at the 4-H Fair, which takes place August 11-13. Although it's a few weeks away, it's not too early to start planning your entries now.

There are dozens of classes in baking, sewing, crafts, vegetables, flowers, and more. There are even three new classes this year: The "largest tomato class," judged by weight; the "largest zucchini class," judged by size; and the "largest sunflower class," judged by flower diameter.

Judging is done on a Danish system, so everyone gets a ribbon and comments on an evaluation form. There is no cost to enter projects except in the new "largest" classes. For those, there is a $.50 fee and the winner in each class will earn the pot of money collected in each class.

All items must be submitted for judging at the 4-H Center on Tuesday, August 9 from 10 a.m.-2 p.m. or 6-8 p.m. only. Please mark your entries with complete name, address, and phone number. All projects need to be picked up on Saturday, August 13 at 4:30 p.m. at the conclusion of the fair. The 4-H Fair Committee cannot be held responsible for any items left past that time.

A complete listing of "open classes" is available. Please call the 4-H Center at (610) 489-4315 to request one or to request a complete schedule of events.

The entire family is invited to come out to the 4-H Fair. A $3 parking donation will be requested.

The 4-H Center is located on Route 113, one mile south of Route 73 near Skippack.

You Ask ? ? ? ? ? You Answer

QUESTION — A reader would like to know if someone has a grain scale that can be bought to weigh saffron or gunpowder.

ANSWER — A York County reader wanted to know how to clean aluminum storm doors or enclosures that are becoming pitted. Thanks to a York County reader who writes: When it is cooler, rub the pitted areas with balled up aluminum wrap. Bits of the aluminum wrap will fill the pitted areas.

ANSWER — For the reader who wanted to know how to get rid of voles, Anne Wiegler of Pottstown has a more elaborate explanation of solving the problem than a previous answer. She writes that voles are small rodents that burrow under grass, making runnels under the lawn. Voles are gray, about 4-6-inches long with short somewhat hairy tails. The easiest way to get rid of them is to get a good cat. If you already have cats that are not doing their job, get a kitten that comes from a long line of barn cats. Females seem to be better hunters, although many males do an excellent job. You can make a pet of the kitten, but don't let it in the house. Feed the cat dry cat food, but nothing too tasty so she will develop a taste for voles. Let her have one litter of kittens before you spay her. Mother cats will hunt to bring back food for their kittens. Our cat Mary is 17 years old and kills about one vole per day. I'd hate to see what our lawn would look like if it weren't for her.

Whether you need bearings, chain, baler belts or other crucial haying parts, count on us to keep your hay on schedule with these timely parts values. You'll find quality John Deere parts as well as Match Plus® parts for other brands.

Be sure round bales stay tight and firm. Wrap them up with quality John Deere baler belts. Three plies of nylon-polyester are woven for heavy loads and consistent length.

ARE CHICKENS BABY DINOSAURS?

Roland M. Leach, Jr.
Professor Of Poultry Science

Many of you may have seen a recent Dave Barry column where he asked the following question: "Which of the following is the nearest living relative of the dinosaur, Tyrannosaurus rex?" (a) a chicken, (b) a crocodile, (c) a lizard, (d) an elephant. Barry quoted The New York Times in announcing the answer — (a) a chicken.

Actually, The New York Times got its information from an article published in Science. In this report, scientists at the University of Wisconsin had the opportunity to examine the structure of young dinosaur bones discovered in Montana.

In order to understand the significance of this report, we need to review some basic concepts of bone growth.

In young growing animals and in man, bone grows by two mechanisms, both of which stop at sexual maturity. The first mechanism causes an increase in bone diameter as the result of the activity of the bone cells, osteoblasts and osteoclasts. Osteoblasts form bone on the outside of the shaft while osteoclasts remove bone from the inside of the bone shaft, making it look like a hollow log.

The second mechanism involves a thin plate of cartilage at the ends of the bones. The cartilage cells in this tissue go through a life cycle (birth, adolescence, maturity, and senility) every 24-48 hours. This process results in increases in bone length. When this process malfunctions, we see developmental deformities such as dwarfism.

The overall development of growth plate cartilage is similar in birds and mammals. However, the avian growth plate is considerably thicker than the mammalian growth plate, having approximately four times the number of cells. Furthermore, there are some subtle differences in the arrangement of cells.

Back to the dinosaur bones. Until the recent discovery of baby dinosaur bones in Montana, only bones from adults had been examined. Since adults no longer have growth plates, comparing dinosaurs with other species was impossible. Examination of the baby dinosaur bones showed that the structure of the growth plate closely resembled that of the avian species, not of lizards or mammals. These results strongly support a theory that there is a close evolutionary relationship between avians and dinosaurs.

These results provide thoughts on the future of our poultry industry. Most people associated with this industry recognize the tremendous progress that has been made in selecting broilers and turkeys for rapid growth rate and feed consumption. Will the poultry geneticists eventually breed a chicken that eats cars and lawyers as occurred in "Jurassic Park"?

Prevent Piglet Crushing

with the

MODEL 90 FARROWING CRATE

Constructed from heavy gauge materials, this crate is designed to reduce crushing with sow comfort in mind. The bowed bottom bars make for a comfortable 33" crate width when the sow lays down, yet the adjustable anti-crush bars eliminate the sow from carelessly dropping on the piglets. This movement restriction does not hamper the sow as lays down, or wants to stand up, as the bars slide up and out of her way.

Folk Festival July 16-17

SCHAEFFERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Historic Schaefferstown's Folk Festival is scheduled here July 16 & 17. Visitors to the festival will learn about the Swiss origin of the Pennsylvania Barn.

Called Swiss Barns by European Travelers during the late 1700s, it has taken American Scholars until 1988 to identify their precise area of origin.

In a landmark discovery, Professor Robert Ensminger has pinpointed the area in eastern Switzerland that produced the Pennsylvania Forebay Bank Barn.

With slides and commentary, Prof. Ensminger will show the location of these barns in Switzerland, their design, use, unique features, and their spread into the farming regions of the United States and Canada.

The Bank Barn, thatched with rye straw, became so popular during the period from the 1760s to 1850 that it replaced the Bottom Barn in Eastern Pennsylvania. One barn near Bethel was thatched as late as 1910. Prof. Ensminger's book entitled "The Pennsylvania Barn" appeared in 1992 and will be on display on July 16-17.

John Hickernell has been eating corn pone from an original Schaefferstown recipe for most of his life. Hickernell has a vast fund of knowledge in the customs and beliefs of his native town and his corn pone recipe will be available to visitors, with tasting samples.

Cooking classes will have tasting samples, recipes, raspberry shrub, foods from the 1771 bake oven, and from the two fireplaces. The Dutch Kitchen will serve ham and string beans and Schnitz and Knepp, and other Dutch foods.

Real sausage sandwiches will also be available.

The new shingle mill and the old saw mill will be in operation, and there will be Bed Symbolic Garden, crafts, sheep to shawl, the flax culture, house tours, literature on thatching and log houses, antique ringpower thresher, and additional attractions.

The lemon sponge pie-baking contest will be held Saturday, July 16.

The 4th annual antique tractor contest will run on Friday, July 15 from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. and on Saturday, July 16 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., with awards given on Saturday.

Saturday and Sunday music will be provided for our visitors and the children will have games, train rides, and Conestoga wagon rides.

Sheepherding with Scotch Border Collies will be demonstrated both days.

Admission to the Friday tractor show is $1. Admission Saturday and Sunday is $2.50 and children under 12 are free. Parking is free.

John Hickernell has eaten corn pone for more than 80 years, using his mother's original Schaefferstown recipe. The question is, what does he put on the corn pone when he eats it? See this on July 16-17 at the folk festival.

Water Quality Workshop Set

WALKERSVILLE, Md. — Water quality issues confront farmers on a daily basis. Many new and innovative ideas practices exist, but information on them is usually unavailable.

To help combat this problem, the Monocacy Project is sponsoring a workshop on three areas of innovation that can enhance water quality. The workshop will be held at the Union Bridge Community Center on Thursday, July 28 from 9:30-2:30 p.m.

Herbert Brodie of the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service will give an introduction and overview of the composting process. The next topic will look at a low-cost/low-labor method of composting introduced from Europe called the passive air windrow system.

John Nelson, a private consultant from Ellicott City, will talk about his experiences with implementing this system in Maryland. This system eliminates the need of constantly turning the compost and would be applicable to a dairy farm operation that wanted to dispose of some of its manure by creating a compost product.

The second issue covered will be how to manage sinkholes on a farm or other private property. A video developed in Pennsylvania, showing capping and management methods used in Pennsylvania, will be shown. Allan Stahl, state engineer for the Soil Conservation Service, will review methods to be used by the SCS in Maryland to assist landowners with this growing problem. Cost-share assistance possibilities will also be discussed.

The final topic will be an overview of the concept of rotational loafing lot management systems as used on conventional dairy operations. The systems provide dry clean areas for animals to exercise out of the barn while protecting water resources. The concept is not designed for forage production, simply to create a clean exercise area. The system therefore has little impact on conventional ration systems or milk production while dramatically improving herd health and reducing somatic cell counts. A video of these systems in Virginia will be shown along with a general discussion on how the system operates.

Call the Monocacy Project Office at (301) 898-0133 or (410) 775-7434 by July 21 if you plan to attend.

30-Year-Old Contest Still Cultivates Interest

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — The 30th anniversary of the National Corn Yield Contest (NCYC) is certain to produce a bumper crop of top yields. High yields are rewarded with top prizes in this annual high-profile contest.

Since its inception in 1965, the NCYC has established a reputation for innovative farming techniques and high yields. "Today, yield is still the primary component of profitable corn production," said Loran Brooks, National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) NCYC chairman and a farmer from Canfield, Ohio.

Brooks said, "The NCYC provides an opportunity to compare your corn production capabilities with other farmers in your state, as well as with corn producers across the country. Farmers can earn awards while gaining knowledge on more efficient techniques for obtaining maximum yields."

All corn farmers are encouraged to participate. This year's entrants can look forward to winning trophies and recognition from the NCGA, along with up to $10,000 in cash, a new car, free trips or free seed from participating seed and chemical companies.

Entries must be postmarked by the final deadline of August 1, to be included in the contest. Rules, entry, and harvest forms can be obtained by contacting the NCGA at (314) 275-9915 or contacting seed or chemical company representatives. The entry fee is $70 per hybrid. Participants must enter a field of at least 10 continuous acres of one corn hybrid.

Winners in the contest will be announced January 15, 1995 and will be recognized at the NCGA's Corn Classic, February 26-28, 1995, in Nashville, Tenn. Trophies will be awarded to the top three winners in each class by state and on the national level. Last year, 465 trophies were awarded.

Brooks said, "As participation and yields have increased over 30 years, so have the classes." Winning has been made easier because farmers only compete with those in similar growing regions; thus, ushering in the possibility for more winners from more regions. The nine entry classes now cover dryland and irrigated acres in conventional or mulch-till, no-till, and ridge-till production programs.

"The NCYC encourages farmers to try new, resourceful production methods such as no-till on a contest plot before possibly adopting them on a large scale," said Brooks.

Herbicide-Resistant Corn Hybrids Under Test

DEKALB, Ill. — Sethoxydim-resistant corn hybrids are in field tests this summer as the result of a joint effort between Dekalb Genetics Corporation and BASF.

The hybrids, which were developed by Dekalb using elite, proprietary germplasm, will offer corn growers more management options, especially those who use a post-emergence herbicide program, said Tom Rice, senior vice president, research.

The Sethoxydim family of herbicides (trade names Poast® and Poast®) has been used for years as a selective broad spectrum post-emergence herbicide for control of annual and perennial grass weeds in soybeans and a number of other crops.

The option to apply sethoxydim herbicides after emergence widens the herbicide application window and allows farmers to practice prescription weed control with less persistent herbicides.

"Growers can wait to see what weeds are present and then treat with an effective herbicide without worrying about crop damage," said Rice. "Treating only as needed is an important aspect of integrated pest management, and should help growers get more profit from every acre."

Sethoxydim-resistant, or SR, corn hybrids also offer an advantage in no-till and minimum-till situations because they provide growers with a grass weed control tool that does not require incorporation. Our new corn hybrids will fit with the way many farmers are managing their corn acres in the '90s," said John Pfund, director of agronomic services. "Post-emergence herbicide programs are often preferred over preplant or preemergence, because farmers treat only the weeds present, helping them to reduce the risk of weed resistance and comply with environmental and operator safety concerns."

According to Pfund, intensive field testing of the new hybrids is under way this summer across the Corn Belt. "We are monitoring the hybrids at hundreds of locations to evaluate performance under diverse environmental conditions and various management practices."

An extensive review of the test results will be made this winter, typical of Dekalb's rigorous product evaluation, before a decision to market hybrids is made. Pfund says the new hybrids will carry a special "SR" designation as part of their hybrid number.

Select Sires has grown from an artificial insemination organization with sales of 182,376 units of semen in 1969 to sales of 442,683 units in 1993. Select Sires is now one of the leading authorities of beef genetics in the world. Wallace has been responsible for acquiring some of the beef industry's top progeny proven sires for calving ease, growth, milk and carcass merit. He has always been a believer in performance testing and national sire evaluation programs. In the early years, he was instrumental in the development of sire evaluation and educating the beef industry in the importance of EPDs, accuracy, and using this information to improve beef cattle genetics.

Wallace is a member of the technical advisory committee of the American Simmental Association and American Angus Association. Additionally, he has served two terms on the board of directors of the Beef Improvement Federation (BIF), during which time he chaired the reproduction and awards committee.

Lower Cost DHI Programs Available

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — Mid-East DHIC, serving Members in Delaware, Maryland and West Virginia and supervising the programs in Lancaster and Crawford counties, now offers alternatives to the traditional DHI programs.

DHIA traditionally has weighed and sampled member herds two milkings per month. This is the way it was always done. In recent years, lower cost and less disruptive alternatives have been developed. They are called A-P and APCS.

The A-P or AM-PM type of test consists of the herd being weighed and sampled one milking per month, alternating the milking weighed and sampled monthly. This program usually costs about 75 percent of what the regular DHI type of testing costs. Although only one milking is sampled, it is factored to represent the normal daily fat/protein percents of each cow. On an annual basis, the fat and protein percents will very closely parallel those obtained from DHI. On a monthly basis, they will vary more.

The APCS or AM-PM component sampling type of test is a hybrid of DHIA and A-P. The DHI supervisor weighs both milkings, but samples only one milking. This type of testing plan works well in larger herds. There is less disruption of the milking operation on test day. And many DHI supervisors believe the fat results with APCS reflect more accurately what the cow is producing. It is nearly impossible to obtain the exact proportion of the cow's production each milking in the sample. The best most supervisors can do is get about half of the sample from each milking.

For more information on these or any DHIA programs, call (301) 733-3322 or write Mid-East DHIC, 1040 Frederick St., Hagerstown, MD 21740.

Region Manager Adds Bradford County

ITHACA, N.Y. — Recently, Northeast DHIA has re-aligned the regions along the southern border of New York state.

This re-alignment will provide better service opportunities for dairies in both New York and Pennsylvania.

Donald Baldwin, a 20-year veteran of Northeast DHIA, will be responsible for Bradford County, Pa. and 10 other New York counties.

Don Baldwin began his Northeast DHIA career in 1974 as a field technician. A region manager since 1976, Baldwin is respected and well-liked by Northeast members and field technicians. His staff of 19 field technicians average more than 15 years of service with the Northeast DHIA. Their test interval is 30.6 and they are responsible for 535 herds and 56,525 cows throughout the region.

All technicians provide Day-One service. Day-One is the program in their computers that enables them to leave reports on the farm on sample day. Among the most popular of these reports is the persistency report and vet check list.

For more information regarding Northeast DHIA services, contact the center at (800) DHI-COWS (800) 344-2697.

Farmers May Apply For Fuel Tax Refunds

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — State Secretary of Agriculture Boyd E. Wolff reminded farmers they may be eligible for a liquid fuel tax refund this summer.

"Farmers have until September 30 to apply for refunds on the 12-cents a gallon state excise tax they paid when they bought fuel that was used for agricultural purposes around the farm; not on highways that are maintained by these taxes," Wolff said.

"This is one of the many things the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania is doing to help farmers," he said. "A simple form and some year-round record keeping can mean money back each year, but many farmers just aren't aware of this exemption."

Farmers who purchased liquid fuels for agricultural production and paid the state excise tax between July 1, 1993 through June 30, 1994 may apply for the tax refunds.

Fuel tax refunds from the State Treasury last year ranged from a low of $5 to a high of $3,000. Almost 13,000 farmers received a refund, which averaged $183.

"Some farmers were not eligible because their fuel deliveries already come tax-free," Wolff said. "But thousands of farmers either didn't realize they can apply for the refund or simply did not bother because it requires keeping records and filing the proper form."

The claim form is simple to complete and must be accompanied by copies of paid receipts or a dealer's statement showing the number of gallons purchased for off-road use, to verify that the state tax was paid.

The Board of Finance and Revenue is mailing out claim forms to 12,866 farmers who got refunds under the program last year. Eligible farmers who don't receive a form by the end of June should contact Lynne Vergot at the Board of Finance and Revenue, Room 500C Finance Building, Harrisburg, PA 17120, (717) 787-6534.

ic advising, career planning, and personal counseling. Advisers in the college are nominated by alumni, faculty, students, and administrators.

Cash, professor of animal science. "He always makes or takes time for students."

In addition to teaching classes in genetics and animal breeding, Hargrove frequently counsels prospective students and their parents. He also participates in the university's Freshman Testing, Counseling and Advising Program (FTCAP).

Big-Jim Unloader...The Unloader of the Future...Available Today.
For 20' - 24' and 30' Silos, With the Possibility of 40' diameter Silos:
Think of Storing 5,000 Tons in One Tower Silo!

Drive your truck or mixer-wagon under the 12' high floor for fast and efficient delivery of your wilted hay or silage. Eliminate conveyors from silos to mixer.

"IT'S A WHOLE NEW WORLD OUT THERE!"

Tower silos that can hold 4,000 tons of forage!!! This is one of the first major changes in the silo industry since the 1950's when farmers went from 12' and 14' diameter silos to 20' and 24' diameter silos. The industry met the challenge. And Now, Sollenberger Silos Corp. is stepping up to meet the challenges of the '90's and beyond. The larger dairies need storage units that will hold 2,000 tons and more, and be able to deliver the feed without spending "Hours Per Day." The poured concrete tower silo is the silo to store the feed, and the Big-Jim Distributor/Unloader is the system to deliver the feed. Today's business-oriented dairymen realize that "Forage Quality is often the single most important factor affecting their profit," and as a result they are searching for ways to store the feed, and deliver it to the cow in the best condition possible. "The tower silo may very well be the best investment that a dairy farmer can make!!"

Store your feed in a poured concrete silo, let gravity do the packing, and deliver the feed directly into your truck or mixer. "Save $20,000 or more per year on machinery and labor costs to store and deliver your feed, compared to bunker silos."

The tower silo may cost more, but labor, machinery, and feed quality savings will pay the difference in 3 years or less. "The Blizzard of '93 and the severe winter of '94 greatly increases your appreciation of the concrete tower silo."

It is time once again to get serious about storing your valuable feed.

JUST COMPLETED...This 30'x100' poured concrete silo with drive-thru for loading directly into your mixer wagon or truck-mounted mixer. The Big-Jim System will deliver over 1000 lbs. per minute of corn silage. Just think...you don't need 6 silos and 6 unloaders to store this much feed...and better yet, you do not have to store your valuable feed on the ground and try to protect it with plastic and used tires!!!

Rural Economy

Cost-efficient Centurydrain™ roofing and siding is on some of the best looking buildings in the country.

Build with Centurydrain roofing and siding and you've built a money-wise structure. Full-hard, high tensile galvanized steel, and an exclusive drain channel for a dry interior give you a building that'll handle years of hard duty and hard weather. Good looking, too. Crisp lines and plenty of bright, long-lasting colors make Wheeling Centurydrain as handsome as it is economical.

New in 1994

You may pay less for some dairy farm equipment... but it can cost you more!

Equipment cost is not the only cost of cooling milk

In the long run, total operating costs of a Mueller' milk-cooling system are generally substantially less than those of "bargain-brand" milk-cooling equipment.

| Example                                                         | Mueller  | Competition |

| Cost of electricity @ .08 kW for 12,000 lbs milk/day for 10 yrs | $17,550 | $22,850    |
| Total operating cost for ten years                              | $58,550 | $50,850    |
| Savings                                                         | $7,700  |             |

BREWERS WET GRAINS

Have You Considered Making BWG a Part of Your Herd's Program?

Brewers wet grains are a part of many dairy rations in this area because they:

- Are very economical.
- Are concentrated and provide protein, energy and digestible fiber in a very efficient manner.
- Provide a significant quantity of bypass protein.
- Are an effective way to extend your forage when it is in short supply.
- Enhance the nutritional content of poor quality forage.
- Are flexible ... can be used with McNess vitamin and mineral premixes in either grain mixes or TMR's (total mixed rations).

Brewers wet grains from Miracle/McNess also offer you the bonus of free ration balancing. We can test your forage and balance your feedstuffs to get the most out of your program. Just call toll-free 800-888-0230.

Rolling Herd Average increases 1400 pounds in just 7 months on AminoTek.

"Since I switched to AminoTek, my cows have been peaking sooner and holding their peaks better. I have increased my rolling herd average by 1400 pounds in just 7 months, while maintaining a 12.5 calving interval with 2.0 services per conception.

The feed quality is Super and the cows have sharp appetites. Service from Sensinigs is Superior and I have absolutely no complaints."

AminoTek Gets More Milk While Reducing Feed Costs.

"I changed to the Master Mix feeding program in August and within one month, my production was up and my feed costs decreased. Since I've changed, we have never dropped below 60 pounds of milk, and we've maintained our fat & protein content.

I have also seen a big improvement in my breeding. The cows are now showing good strong heats."

PORCH POSTS/LAMP POSTS

Kiln Dried Ponderosa & Sugar Pine

Porch posts and matching lamp posts help create an atmosphere of understated elegance. They project the warm, welcome feeling that only finely crafted wood can offer. Each post features the smooth, gentle turnings that effectively soften the hard lines and corners of most homes. Made entirely of kiln-dried pine, posts can be stained or painted. When finished, they will match or accent any exterior color scheme.

Every post is treated with a wood preservative that resists the effects of weather and time. They are designed to be a graceful addition to any home and a lasting statement of good taste.

Cattlemen's Field Day Planned

LIGONIER (Westmoreland Co.) — Saturday, July 9 will be the date, and Laurel Valley Farms, here in Ligonier, will be the location for the 1994 Annual Cattlemen's Summer Field Day.

Intensive grazing, fencing and watering systems, quality assurance and selection for complete production, characteristics will be the main topics. The field day will be at the Laurel Valley Farms, just south of Ligonier, with registration at 9 a.m. The annual Pennsylvania Junior Simmental show will start at 9 a.m.

Tours of the farm will begin at 9:30 a.m. and will include observations of intensive grazing, fencing, and watering systems. The tours and demonstrations will also include observations and discussions of different types of cattle, and how these cattle fit into meeting the needs of each segment of the modern beef cattle industry.

Speakers about intensive grazing and support systems will be Pete LeVan, beef cattle operations manager in Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science; Mike Towns, manager of Laurel Valley Farm; and other individuals to be announced later.

Dr. Bob Schalles, professor of animal science at Kansas State University and a noted authority on cattle improvement programs, will be the featured speaker. Schalles is on leave from Kansas State University with the American Simmental Association in a technical service and an administrative capacity. A special presentation on the importance and conduct of beef cattle quality assurance programs will be made by Tammy Balthaser, industry relations coordinator, Pennsylvania Beef Council.

Invitations have been extended to both gubernatorial candidates to discuss their planned agricultural programs. The lunch will consist of the Keystone Ribeye Sandwich served at a nominal cost. Coffee and donuts will be provided at registration. Commercial exhibitors are also invited to attend, since this gives participating producers the opportunity to visit with representatives of companies servicing the livestock industry to learn about new products.

Information about the program can be obtained from the offices of the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association, R.D. #1, Box 83, Port Matilda, PA 16870, (814) 692-4208; Laurel Valley Farms (412) 238-7116; or Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science, 324 Henning Bldg., University Park, PA 16802, (814) 863-3659.

Etling Receives Fulbright Scholarship

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Arlen Etling, associate professor of agricultural and extension education in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, has received a Fulbright Scholarship to work in Mexico during the 1994-1995 academic year.

Etling will teach courses to enhance the skills and knowledge of volunteer educators working in programs to strengthen Mexican communities.

"My interest in the Mexican culture and my work with Mexican universities over the past 24 years has led me to this point," said Etling. "Through those contacts I've identified the need and opportunity to build models for strengthening education outside the classroom."

Etling has taught workshops on leadership and organizational development to 4-H volunteers in Durango, Mexico. Since 1987, he has developed curricula for Spanish-speaking extension educators.

For Professional Landscapers
Turf and Sod Producers

(SLP-8) 3 Pt. - 8' (SLP-10) 3 Pt. - 10' (SL-10) Pull Type 10'

The Brillion Turfmaker is designed to seed large areas at precise rates. Accurate placement of seed at the proper depth assures maximum germination and thicker, more uniform stands with seed saving sup to 50%. Also available in 8 ft. and 10 ft. pull type.

SEED
WAY

Front rollers crush lumps, press down small stones, and form a firm seedbed. Precision seeding devices meter out the seed onto the well prepared seedbed. Rear rollers split the shallow ridges formed by the front rollers and gently firm the soil around the tiny seeds.

Farmers: Report Weather-Damaged Crops

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, July 2, 1994-D7

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Before destroying weather-damaged crops, farmers should notify the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Services (ASCS) to obtain 1994 acreage credit and documentation for future crop acreage bases.

Several areas of the county have experienced high winds, downpours of rain in minutes, and some hail damage because of thunderstorms. This has caused severe soil erosion in planted fields and flattened the grain.

"When we inspect the area for this purpose, evidence of the failed acreage must be present," Berks County ASCS official Richard Troutman said.

Farmers are filing acreage reports with ASCS to qualify for benefits on their 1994 program crops. The program participants must certify crops and acreage planted, the uses to be made of these crops, and cropland acres to be devoted to the acreage conservation reserve and other land uses.

To assist producers with crop certification, ASCS offers measurement services. Producers can request measurement of planted crops, ACR land, fields or subdivisions, total cropland and land areas for other purposes.

The certification deadline for 1994 planted acres of corn, grain, sorghum, soybeans, cupay, and hay is July 15.

Rhino disc mowers feature an easy access outerbar. The innovative design of the outerbar allows access to the disc spindle shaft and gear module without disassembly of the entire cutterbar, reducing maintenance costs and downtime. The hardened rock guards are designed to help protect the entire leading edge of the cutterbar from damage and, along with the skid shoes, are easily replaceable. A heavy-duty CAT II & Cat II offset three-point hitch made of 4"x6" thick wall tubing is standard to provide dependable service. A safety breakaway system is built in to provide mainframe protection against sudden impacts when mowing. With 5' of blade overlap and blade tip speed of 15,814 FPM, Rhino disc mowers provide a clean, smooth cut. Rugged construction and high performance are two reasons Rhino disc mowers are the ideal choice for fast, efficient grass mowing.

JOHN DEERE BALERS DELIVER CONSISTENCY, CONSISTENTLY

Building "square-er," stackable, solid bales is what our proven hay control system is all about.

Once hay is inside the baler, a continuous-flow, floating auger moves the crop into a tapered chamber. Precompressing the hay before it reaches the bale chamber. This makes John Deere bales denser, and more consistent. A difference you'll notice when stacking and feeding bale after John Deere bale.

JOHN DEERE...THE FASTEST MOVING BALERS AROUND

Why do more people choose John Deere balers? Because John Deere balers are easy to use and they deliver the best bales. Bales that hold their shape, and quality.

And they deliver quality bales in tough crops and conditions, too. Just customize your John Deere baler with one or more of these productivity options.

AGGRESSIVE ROTARY ACTION LETS YOU EMPTY WAGONS FAST

Keep your forage and your operation moving with a 100 (540 rpm) Forage Blower.

Aggressive Feeding lets you unload wagons fast, for a quick turnaround time. The 100 series blower features a rotary feed table that shoots forage into the blowing chamber. And since the material is already moving when it reaches the fan, you'll need less horsepower to blow silage into the silo.

REMEMBER THE 3 LAWS OF HOOBER RECONDITIONED AXIAL-FLOW COMBINES...

LAW #1- (17) Years Old is not equal to (=) WORN OUT...

Because of the simple design of the CASE IH Axial Flow Combines, they can be reconditioned by HOOBER'S expert combine mechanics to like-new condition, so they provide 2nd and 3rd owners years of satisfactory and profitable operation.

LAW #2- (4,000) HOURS PLUS (+) HOOBER RECONDITIONING EQUALS (=) YEARS OF DEPENDABLE SERVICE...

(4,000) Hours on a conventional combine usually means they'll be too much trouble to be dependable. Axial-Flow combines with (4,000) hours, reconditioned by HOOBER'S, have proven to run for years when purchased by farmers in PA, MD, DE and NJ

LAW #3- A CASE IH AXIAL-FLOW COMBINE SERVICED BY EXPERT HOOBER COMBINE MECHANICS EQUALS (=) LITTLE OR NO DOWNTIME DURING HARVEST...

When Hooper's expert combine mechanics service and repair AXIAL-FLOW combines in the off-season, they run dependably through the season.
